JAPAN OPENS BIG PUSH ON DEFIANT FOE

SENATE PASSES RESERVE CREDIT EXPANSION BILL

WILL HELP EFFORTS OF BANKING SYSTEM

Completes Urgent Phases of Emergency Nonpartisan Legislation.

(Associated Press.)

The Senate yesterday passed the Glass-Steagall bill putting to work the Nation's idle gold and opening the vast resources of the Federal Reserve for an expansion of credit.

The measure bearing the promise of leaders of both parties to speed America on an upward economic swing already has passed the House. It will become a law next week.

The Senate went a step farther than the House and voted to make the life of the bill two years instead of one. This is one of the few differences between the House and Senate which must be composed before the legislation goes to President Hoover.

Frazier's Assault Futile.

A shout of "aye" met the call for passage in the Senate late yesterday. No demand was made for a record vote. Senator Frazier (Republican), North Dakota, briefly assailed the bill as a "bankers' bill," offering no hope for agriculture. Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, sponsor of the measure, had the support, however, of almost the entire Senate, and the chorus of "ayes" came as Frazier concluded.

Senator Blaine (Republican), Wisconsin, earlier in the day accused the administration of undue alarm and of making the business community fearful.

The legislation completes the urgent phases of the nonpartisan emergency program urged by President Hoover. It provides for rediscounting in emergencies of paper held by Federal Reserve member banks which is not now eligible.

Vast Expansion of Credit.

Through this it is hoped to melt the stores of "frozen" paper in the Nation's banks and instill a new confidence in the bankers, who were accused by Senator Glass of failing to function in the economic crisis.

Secretary Mills estimated the measure would theoretically allow for a $10,000,000,000 expansion in credit.

The legislation also would make it possible for direct Government obligations to be put up as collateral for Federal reserve note issues.

The Treasury informed Congress that there is about $450,000,000 in "free gold"—bullion not now being used as reserve for currency—available for reserve for new currency.

Will Avert Gold Raids.

The law requires a 40 per cent gold reserve on notes with the remaining 60 per cent secured by paper. With the new paper available for note issues, this "free gold" can be put to work. Mr. Mills estimated the total expansion of currency which could be made as a result of the legislation is $3,500,000,000. It is not expected this amount will be put into circulation, however. The means of putting the "free gold" to work also is expected to fortify the American banking system against gold raids

McFadden to Seek House Seat Again

Towanda, Pa., Feb. 19 (A. P.).—Representative Louis T. McFadden, of Canton, fiery opponent of administration financial measures, today announced his candidacy for reelection to the House from the Fifteenth District of Pennsylvania.

The announcement put an end to rumors he would run, with the support of the Pinchot organization, for United States senator in opposition to James J. Davis. It also indicated he would make no campaign for the Presidency. Petitions to place his name in the North Dakota presidential primary were circulated but not filed in that State.

He will oppose Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the governor, and Frederick Fickenbacker, who has announced his candidacy on an antiprohibition platform.

PAINLEVE ABANDONS MINISTRY EFFORTS

Fails to Win Over Laval and Tardieu; Latter May Be Called On.

Paris, Saturday, Feb. 20 (A.P.).—Former Premier Paul Painleve announced this morning after a night of unbroken conferences that he had abandoned his attempt to form a ministry to succeed the cabinet of Pierre Laval.

M. Painleve attributed his failure to the refusal of M. Laval and former Premier Andre Tardieu to go along with him in a ministry of leftist complexion.

At 4 a. m. he started for the Elysee Palace to inform President Paul Doumer of his decision. Later in the day the president will begin again his search for a premier and in political circles it was considered likely that he would call upon M. Tardieu.

Before turning to the left M. Painleve had attempted to form a "cabinet of conciliation," but that effort came to naught when Andre Tardieu, minister of war in the late ministry of Pierre Laval, stepped out of the picture.

In the event that M. Painleve definitely gave up all attempts to form a ministry, it was uncertain where President Paul Doumer would turn next.

M. Tardieu, war minister for his political ally, M. Laval, who was put out of office by the Senate earlier in the week, announced tonight that he was definitely out of consideration. Previously it had been said that M. Tardieu would become minister of state without portfolio, so that he could continue to head the French delegation at the world disarmament conference at Geneva.

M. Laval himself declined to join in the new ministry, even before M. Tardieu. Joseph Paul-Boncour, vice chairman of the French delegation at Geneva, was understood to have accepted the ministry of foreign affairs in a Painleve cabinet, however. (Geneva dispatches said Paul-Boncour had accepted the plan "in principle.")

Thus on the surface it appeared that M. Painleve, once classified as a radical, would choose a ministerial group with a distinct radical tinge. The radical bloc in the Chamber of

De Valera's Control Of Dail Held Certain

Dublin (Saturday), Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Eamon De Valera, leader of the Fianna Fail and bitter foe of England, was unofficially conceded control of the Dail today as returns from the Free State election gave him a certain plurality over the administration party of President William T. Cosgrave.

With all but 16 of the 146 seats accounted for, the Fianna Fail—which is sworn to abolish the oath of allegiance to King George—held a lead of 16 seats over the Cosgrave party.

The standing at 1:15 a. m. was:

De Valera and allies—Fianna Fail, 61; Laborites, 9; total, 70. Administration—League of Gael, 45; Independents, 10; Agrarians, 5; total, 60.

The Laborites have officially said they would support De Valera if he will accept their unemployment relief program. In any event the Fianna Fail was certain of being the strongest party in the Dail.

All ministers except Minister of Industry and Commerce McGilligan have been reelected. The count in his constituency will be made today.

The greatest excitement prevailed throughout Dublin and other cities as the returns were received. Large crowds surrounded the newspaper of-

Capital Engineer Dies in Car Upset

Oscar Sperling, 40 years old, Washington consulting engineer, 1400 L street northwest, was killed yesterday, and George T. Ash, jr., 20 years old, Washington student, was slightly injured when the automobile in which they were riding left the road near Louisville, Ga., according to word received last night by the parents of Mr. Ash. The young man lives with them at 1236 Shepherd street northwest.

The two men left Washington Thursday morning for Palm Beach, Fla., according to Mrs. Ash. Mr. Ash was driving the engineer, who is also an inventor, with offices in the Union Trust Building, to the Florida city on a business trip. At the time of the accident, however, Mr. Sperling was at the wheel.

He apparently lost control of the car, and it skidded from the road into a ditch. He was almost instantly killed, but Mr. Ash suffered only cuts and bruises. Mrs. Ash said that Mr. Sperling, as far as she knew, had no relatives in Washington, but had a brother in Sweden.

Shouse Plan Loses In Florida Decision

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 19 (A.P.).—Florida Democrats took their stand today against Jouett Shouse's advocacy for uninstructed delegations to the national convention and decided to call a presidential preferential primary.

By a vote of 45 to 4, the State committee adopted a resolution setting the primary for June 7 and backed it up with another resolution that Florida's delegation should support the choice of the voters until it appears to two-thirds of the delegates that such support would be fruitless.

HOOVER ASKS ACTION TO END SHORT SALES

Calls on Stock Exchange to Stop Indefensible Bear Raids as Public Aid.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

For the second time within four months, President Hoover yesterday called upon the membership of the New York Stock Exchange to end the artificial depression of security prices by unwarranted and indefensible bear raids.

Alluding to the tremendous increase in professional "short" commitments during January, which he said "had brought discouragement to the country as a whole," the President asked bluntly for "adequate measures" to protect the public interest against speculative excesses. As in his October appeal to the exchange managers, he again emphasized the distressing consequences of artificially depressed prices to the entire Nation.

"Individuals who use the facilities of the exchange for such purposes are not contributing to the recovery of the United States," the formal White House statement said.

The President did not comment on the new trading rule announced by the stock exchange late Thursday afternoon which sharply limits the loaning of securities to cover short commitments. Although this rule is not to become operative until April 1, there appears to be a disposition to await its testing.

Neither did the President allude to the various legislative proposals to control unsound market operations which now are under consideration in Congress. His statement was generally interpreted, however, as a warning to the traders that unless

Washington Essay Contest Lauded by Dr. Leo S. Rowe

Director General of Pan-American Union Hails Post's $1,000 Prize Competition as Service to Nation; Many Students Ask Booklets.

That the Pan-American Union is endeavoring to arouse a deeper interest in Washington's life among the school children of the countries of Latin America was brought out in a communication to The Washington Post yesterday from Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, commending The Post George Washington Essay Contest.

Dr. Rowe wrote: "I want to congratulate you on the patriotic service which The Post is rendering in arranging the Washington Essay Contest for the pupils of the schools.

"You are thereby arousing not only a general interest in the life and work of Washington but a desire on the part of the younger generation to become better acquainted with the details of Washington's life and activities. My desire to extend to you cordial congratulations is strengthened by reason of the fact that we are endeavoring at the Pan-American Union to arouse a deeper interest in Washington's life among the school children of the countries of Latin America.

"It will be of interest to you," continued Dr. Rowe, "that quite a number of our sister republics have given the name 'United States' to one or more of their public schools, and in these schools special exercises will be held as a tribute to the memory of Washington.

"The example which The Washington Post has set will undoubtedly stimulate similar effort in other sections of the United States and the service which you have rendered therefore assumes a Nation-wide significance.

"Permit me, as a citizen, to express a sense of obligation."

Murray Definitely in Race; Authorizes Georgia Filing

The Oklahoma executive announced late today he had sent a telegram to Georgia citizens advising them he would permit his name to be filed in that State for the Democratic preference primaries.

"I should have waited until tomorrow," he added.

The Oklahoma party convention will be held here tomorrow. The Murray-for-President theme song of Oklahoma's Democracy was carried officially to Gov. Murray's door for the first time today when the State Democratic central committee requested him to become a candidate.

The "serenade" was voiced in a resolution adopted unanimously at the biennial reorganization meeting of the State committee after the body had reelected R. M. McCool as chairman and chosen other officers in a harmonious session.

"We earnestly urge Gov. William H. Murray to permit his name to be presented to the State Convention

U. S. SENTIMENT FOR BOYCOTT ON JAPAN GROWING

ACTION IS EXPECTED AT LEAGUE SESSION

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

Sentiment throughout the United States is gradually mobilizing in favor of an American embargo on all shipments to Japan, it became known here last night. Letters and telegrams have been received at the State Department and at the White House urging the United States to cut off all economic intercourse with Japan as long as her militaristic attitude toward China remains.

The forthcoming extraordinary session of the Assembly of the League of Nations to deal with the Shanghai situation will probably see the invocation of Article XVI of the Covenant by the member nations, particularly the smaller ones, against the government at Tokyo.

A group of distinguished men and prominent educators in the country appealed to President Hoover to concur with the League of Nations in any economic boycott against Japan in the present crisis.

Petition to President.

Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War in President Wilson's Cabinet, headed the action of this group. Others included President A. Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard University; Edward A. Filene, well-known Boston merchant; Willis J. Abbott, of the Christian Science Monitor; President Ernest Martin Hopkins, of Dartmouth College; President Livingston Farrand, of Cornell University; Acting President Guy Stanton Ford, of University of Minnesota; President Alexander G. Ruthven, of University of Michigan, and the publicist, Chester Rowell.

The petition to the President says: "The United States is not a member of the league, but it is a party to the Kellogg-Briand pact and there can be no doubt that Japan, contrary to that pact, has sought to settle a dispute by other than pacific means. What will our Government do? Will

While her husband was away at a lodge meeting and her son, 10, and daughter, 12, were enjoying themselves at a party a few doors away, Mrs. Laura Bell Blevins, 36 years old, sealed up the kitchen of their home at 1167 Abbey place northwest, last night and turned on four jets of the gas stove.

The tragedy was discovered by her small son when he came back to the house about an hour and fifteen minutes later for an article he had forgotten. He found the house dark and when he opened the front door smelled gas. Frightened, he ran back to the home of Robert W. Booth, 1163 Abbey place, and called Mr. Booth.

He found Mrs. Blevins on the floor of the kitchen, the door and windows closed and stuffed with paper. Mr. Booth called the fire rescue squad and Casualty Hospital, but it was too late to save the woman. She was pronounced dead.

Glassford Sits as Judge After Haul of Panhandlers

Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, superintendent of police, last night held court on two dozen panhandlers culled from the city's streets in an all-day drive to rid Washington of mendicants.

Some of the men will face a judge in Police Court this morning, some were handed over to the care of relief organizations, while others were sent away with the stern admonition to refrain from soliciting alms on the streets.

Smoking a pipe and clad in well-cut tweeds, Gen. Glassford interrogated all of the men brought in. A room full of arresting policemen, newspaper reporters and the men on trial themselves viewed the unusual proceeding. Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, executive officer, stood at his chief's elbow and helped him pass judgment.

One of the first men brought before the police chief was asked why he begged. He said:

"That's a good way to get a job, but in these days I haven't had

BAYONET ADVANCE IS LAUNCHED WITH HELP OF BARRAGE

AMERICANS EVACUATE AREA; TROOPS ARE IN LINE OF FIRE

Tokyo's Commanding Officer Says Nation's Patience Has Been Exhausted and Orders Advance; Defenders Reply With Big Guns.

(Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press.)

Shanghai (Saturday), Feb. 20.—The great array of military strength Japan has been massing here during the last few weeks was flung against the Chinese positions along a 16-mile front from Shanghai to Woosung this morning in the greatest military action since the World War.

The purpose of the Japanese assault was to smash the strong Chinese positions near Kiangwan, 2 miles north of Hongkew Park in the International Settlement, and from that vantage point to deal with the troops holding the ends of the line at Chapei and Woosung.

Barrage Covers Bayonet Charge.

Japanese assault lines of infantrymen advanced with fixed bayonets behind a barrage of World War proportions laid down on the Chinese strongholds at Kiangwan. Meanwhile numerous big bombers harassed the entrenched Chinese.

It was reliably reported that the Kiangwan positions had been taken over by the Eighty-seventh and Eighty-eighth divisions of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's crack troops.

This was looked upon as a development of the utmost importance, as hitherto the Nineteenth Chinese Route Army has done all the fighting in Shanghai. The Japanese have endeavored to stress the local nature of their activities by saying their purpose was to chastise the Nineteenth. Gen. Chiang is China's chief military commander, and participation by his troops in the action put it on a national rather than a local scale.

Start of Big Push.

The big push started at 8:50 a. m. The signal for it was a thundering volley from the Japanese big guns stationed in Hongkew Park. The Japanese ultimatum, demanding that the Chinese forces be withdrawn 12 miles from Shanghai, had expired at 7 a. m.

Three hours after the hostilities started the Woosung end of the Chinese line burst into action. The Chinese had brought in additional artillery there and they rained projectiles into the Japanese trenches. Some of their guns were trained on the Japanese cruiser Yubari, lying off the Woosung waterfront.

Japanese naval headquarters announced that shells were dropping all about the cruiser but the Chinese gunners had not succeeded in scoring a hit.

The morning was heavy and foggy when the big offensive was launched, but after midday the murk lifted and there was brilliant sunshine. The temperature was snappy. Conditions were ideal for the big air circus that the overwhelmingly strong squadrons of Japan were putting on over the whole battlefront.

Chinese Position Bombed.

Naval headquarters revealed that airmen had bombed Yanglingkow, a heavily fortified Chinese position, northwest of the Paoshan forts.

No infantry action occurred in the vicinity of Woosung during the early hours of the engagement, but the Japanese planned to open up on that front as well as in Chapei if they succeeded in breaking the Chinese line at Kiangwan.

A spokesman at naval headquarters said the command intended to clean out Chapei "with a minimum action possible in the hope of protecting the foreign settlement."

It was in the tortuous streets of Shanghai, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Japanese troops were repulsed in the first phase of their big offensive today when Chinese troops, fighting stubbornly, recaptured the village of Kiangwan and beat off a tank attack. Lieut. Gen. Uyeda, Japanese commander, immediately ordered an aerial attack, and Japanese military and naval airplanes began bombing Chapei and Kiangwan preparatory to an infantry charge. The Japanese tank assault revealed the Chinese troops had mined the area heavily and had planted hidden batteries of 4.7 guns, which threatened to put the Japanese tank force out of commission. It retreated under heavy fire to a point of safety, where the commanders went into a hurried conference to consider the next move.

Shanghai (Saturday), Feb. 20 (U. P.).—A shell fired during the height of the Japanese offensive today completely wrecked the headquarters of a United States Marine detail guarding the Tungyin cotton mill within the boundaries of the International Settlement. The Marines had just vacated the room to change guards and none was injured. It was not determined whether the shell was fired by Japanese or Chinese.

Manila, P. I. (Saturday), Feb. 20 (U. P.).—All cable lines between Manila and Shanghai were severed today. They apparently were cut near Woosung, down the river from Shanghai. The Great Northern lines, which had been operating continuously heretofore, were out between Hongkong and Shanghai, it was reported here. The eastern extension, which had been restored earlier in the week, also were out of operation. Radio Corporation was still working its Cheenju auxiliaries in Chinese territory near Shanghai.

Tokyo (Saturday), Feb. 20 (U.P.).—The Japanese foreign office spokesman announced today that the French, British, United States and Italian ministers had visited the Japanese minister at Shanghai last night and again called Japan's attention to the danger to foreigners in the Japanese offensive. The ministers said that their governments must reserve decision on the situation created by the Japanese ultimatum to Chinese troops. The

LEAGUE ASSEMBLY SESSION IS CALLED

Convenes March 3 to Study China's Case Against Japanese.

Geneva, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—An extraordinary session of the League of Nations Assembly—the second in its thirteen years of existence—was summoned tonight for March 3 to adjudicate China's case against Japan.

Chairman Joseph Paul-Boncour, of the council, made a final appeal to the two nations to avert impending hostilities at Shanghai and announced the assembly would be convoked "because China has requested it and not because of the impotence of the council." One delegate after another then adjured Japan to postpone the execution of the ultimatum.

The council acted on the petition of Dr. W. W. Yen, Chinese delegate, and in the face of protests by the Japanese spokesman, Naokate Sato, after deciding that Japan's legal objections to the meeting were invalid. The American Government was immediately informed of the development.

The assembly is assured of a complete attendance in view of the presence of the delegations of more than 50 nations at the world disarmament conference. The body has not convened since its regular session last September.

The imminence of large-scale military operations at Shanghai and the establishment of the independent state of Ankuo in Manchuria lent added importance to the meeting and observers expected important developments to grow out of it.

Tokyo Spokesman Jeered.

An acrimonious debate between the Chinese and Japanese spokesmen preceded the council's move. Dr. Yen asserted that a state of open war existed at Shanghai, with Japan taking the offensive, and his opponent replied that the assembly could not settle the conflict.

"We are on the eve of a battle in which 100,000 will participate," said Dr. Yen, in reference to China's rejection of the Japanese ultimatum. "The situation is simply intolerable. We are prepared to resist and an attack on the Nineteenth Route Army defending Shanghai will be regarded as an attack on the Chinese government."

M. Sato heard ironic laughter from spectators when he said Japan's interests in Manchuria and Shanghai had never been protected by the league and he drew jeers when he said his country resorted to force only to defend the interests of her people in China.

"It is regrettable that the council will transfer this matter to the assembly," he continued, "because that will not settle the conflict."

The league covenant should not be applied to China, the Japanese spokesman said, because she was not a unified nation, but a catholic one. He denied that Japan was trying to stir up trouble in China and said her troops would be withdrawn from Shanghai when her interests were safe, leaving the city under international protection.

Blames Japan for Chaos.

Dr. Yen ridiculed the statement that Japan had never received aid from the league. "She occupies two hundred thousand miles of Chinese territory," he said, "and has bombarded Shanghai and Nanking. What she needs is punishment from the league, not help."

To the charge of chaos, he accused Japan of helping one side against the other in China in order to promote dissension. "England and America want to see a strong, United China," he continued. "Japan wants to see just the opposite. But China is united now as never before.

"Japan is waging a war from which she wants to gain all the advantages without assuming the responsibility. Japan's statement that she won't annex Manchuria recalls the statement she made she wouldn't annex Korea."

The last time the assembly met in extraordinary session was in 1926 when Germany applied for membership in the league. Her bid was repudiated and the session was considered a failure.

U. S. SENTIMENT GROWING FOR BOYCOTT OF JAPAN

it refuse to sever commercial relations and thereby prevent almost all the world from bringing to bear economic pressure which will certainly stop the present bloodshed; or will it act in harmony with other nations to stop it?

"We appeal to the President and Congress to signify to the league that we will concur in economic measures it may take to restore peace."

The position of the United States in such an emergency would devolve upon Congress for clarification, for it was pointed out in responsible quarters here last night that only a joint session of Congress could enact the necessary legislation forbidding the issuance of clearance papers to American ships for Japanese ports.

In the event that the League of Nations invokes the summary provisions of Article XVI, all commerce or trade with Japan would immediately be severed. The United States not being a member of the league could naturally continue to carry on trade and commerce with the outlawed nation, but the evidences of popular sentiment indicate a decided swing in favor of concurrent embargo action by this Government.

The State Department declined to discuss this or any other phase of the Shanghai crisis, Secretary Stimson indicating by his eloquent silence the gravity and seriousness of the crisis there. Yesterday afternoon he spent the entire afternoon in reviewing the tactical and topographical features of the Shanghai district in company with his Assistant Secretary of State, James Grafton Rogers, at his home in Woodley.

The Senate yesterday approved the appointment of Joseph Clark Grew as Ambassador to Japan, succeeding W. Cameron Forbes. Mr. Grew, now Ambassador to Turkey, will leave his post there within a few days and will come to Washington before going to Tokyo to relieve Mr. Forbes.

In the Japanese elections today the present junker elements in control of the government, mainly supported by the Seiyukai faction, threaten to sweep the country in the face of the Minseito or moderate group, which is under control of such leaders as former Premier Wakatsuki and Baron Shidehara.

The Japanese action against Shanghai will not be affected by the success of either party, as it is believed that Japanese prestige is so compromised with the offensive launched by Japanese military and naval forces, that no withdrawal now could even be considered. The success of the militaristic elements of the party now in power will perhaps involve the Japanese people in a series of military moves with the object of cutting up the entire map of China into a group of dependencies. Such an undertaking in the face of Secretary Stimson's manifesto of January 7 would be regarded as utterly inadmissible by the United States.

The forthcoming meeting of the League Assembly in Geneva will have a decided influence upon the course of American policy in China, as invocation of Article 16 will constitute an international boycott of all Japanese shipping.

The provisions of article 16 are as follows:

"Should any member of the league resort to war in disregard of its covenants it shall ipso facto, be deemed to have committed an act of war against all other members of the league, which hereby undertake immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade and/or financial relations, the prohibition of all intercourse between their nationals and the nationals of the covenant-breaking state, and the prevention of all financial, commercial or personal intercourse between the nationals of the covenant-breaking state and the nationals of any other state, whether a member of the league or not."

CHINA IS NOT ISSUE IN JAPANESE VOTING

Government Party Expected to Win; Sending of More Troops Is Studied.

Tokyo, Saturday, Feb. 20 (A.P.).—Japan's voters went to the polls today while government leaders pondered the need of sending still more troops to Shanghai to enforce their ultimatums.

The Seiyukai (government) party was expected to emerge victorious over the Minseito (opposition) party in a campaign fought chiefly on the inflation issue. Both parties support in the main the state's military policy and the result is unlikely to affect the course of the Sino-Japanese conflict.

Premier Inukai called on Emperor Hirohito last night and was understood to have submitted grave decisions for his approval. His move came after an important cabinet meeting at which Minister of War Araki warned that Marshal Chiang Kai-Shek was reported to be leading heavy reinforcements into the Shanghai lines in defiance of the Japanese demands.

May Send More Troops.

M. Araki told the Associated Press that if these reports were true the Japanese land and naval forces would be placed in a more serious position and that he might be forced to dispatch additional reinforcements to China.

"Our intelligence reports indicate that there are at present 90,000 Chinese soldiers facing our men in the Shanghai area," he said, "including Chiang's troops which are reported to have joined the Nineteenth Route Army. If these reports prove true we may be compelled to reinforce our expedition proportionately."

He declined to say how many more soldiers would be necessary nor whether they already were prepared to leave, beyond admitting that the general staff was always ready for emergencies. It has not been decided whether to send a full ranking general to replace Lieut. Gen. Kenkichi Uyeda in command.

Seek to Protect Ships.

The 12-mile evacuation area outlined in the ultimatum to the Chinese army was defined with a view to protecting foreign ships entering the port of Shanghai, other officials said. The official status of the zone would be settled on in cooperation with other powers if and when the Chinese withdraw, it was said.

Accusations that the United States had a hand in the drafting of the League of Nations' latest note of protest were withdrawn by the foreign office. Official dispatches from Geneva were said to have rectified the misunderstanding and shown that Secretary General Sir Eric Drummond was the author.

More than 13,000,000 voters were entitled to choose 466 representatives to the Lower House out of 710 candidates on the ballot. Of these 347 are Seiyukai men, 280 Minseito, 48 Independent and 35 Proletarian.

Col. Roosevelt Arrives.

The consensus of political observers predicted the winning of 250 seats by the Seiyukai party, now in the minority, to 215 for the Minseito party.

The opposition has been handicapped by the recent assassination of former Finance Minister Inouye and the illness of former Foreign Minister Shidehara.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, new Governor of the Philippines, arrived on his way to assume his position. With Mrs. Roosevelt and their daughter, Grace, he was a guest of American Ambassador Cameron W. Forbes, at a dinner attended by Japanese officials, and he is scheduled for an interview with the emperor.

Chinese Morale Is Higher As Shanghai Battle Opens

Japanese Marines Admit 'Losing Face' in Initial Failure to Dislodge Foes; Eyewitness Finds Both Sides Impatient While Awaiting Zero Hour.

Editor's Note—In the dark hours before the Japanese commanders ordered a general offensive against the Chinese defenders of Shanghai this morning, H. R. Ekins, United Press Correspondent, toured the front lines of the rival armies. Thus he was able to obtain and cable to Washington a close-up description of what went on behind the lines as the zero hour approached. Although Ekins has been prevented by the censors from giving the exact location of some of the troop, airplane and artillery concentrations, his dispatch reveals the full extent of the plans that were made on each side for the long-delayed battle of Shanghai.

Shanghai, Saturday, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—The zero hour for the battle of Shanghai has arrived.

It is 7 a. m. The cold, gray mist of dawn rolls over the city. A red sun rises from the China Sea to the east.

The order for battle is given by the Japanese military command as the ultimatum expires.

The Chinese batteries speak first, anticipating the Japanese attack. The Japanese artillery replies. There is intermittent firing.

Beginning of Battle.

Thus begins the battle of Shanghai—a battle that may go down in history as one of the most portentous in this century.

During an all-night tour of the Japanese and Chinese front lines—I moved out just in time to escape the heavy bombardment which actually started the big push—I found both sides impatient, tense, nervous and ready to clash with bayonet and rifle, machine gun and heavy artillery.

There were the Chinese in short, slate-gray knee breeches with gray wrapped puttees and many wearing felt slippers. Their uniforms were padded and quilted against the cold, their military caps bore the blue and white sun emblem of the Kuomintang.

Their morale seemed high. Some of them talked about how their famous Nineteenth Route Army of China had held the line against the combined assaults of the Japanese marines and air forces. Most of them were seasoned fighters with years of experience in civil warfare that has swept China.

Many Young Soldiers.

Inside the Japanese lines I found line after line of smart, well-drilled soldiers in khaki uniforms with dark green, almost black puttees, steel helmets, heavy knapsacks. Many of them were just boys out for their first baptism of blood, and a little nervous about it, though striving to appear as "hard boiled" as some of the veterans they were billeted with.

Nearby were Japanese marines in their regulation blue-jacket uniforms, white leggins, knapsacks and cartridge belts. Some of them looked glum, admitted feeling that they had "lost face" in not being able to evict the stubborn Chinese without the help of the army.

Stopped here and there by sentries until I showed my credentials, I pushed my way through to the two Japanese landing fields where dozens of mechanics were tuning up airplanes and loading them with machine gun ammunition and aerial bombs.

Tanks Warmed Up.

The Japanese Tank Corps, too, was in action, warming up the tanks and working over them by the light of flares. The censor will not permit me to disclose the location of these two airdromes.

I tried to get aboard a Japanese tank in order to join the advance and thus obtain an eyewitness account of the opening stages of the battle, but the Japanese commander politely and firmly refused.

Speaking English, he said:

"There must be no danger to Americans in this show."

Swinging back into the city I found the geisha houses brilliantly lighted, their inhabitants wide-eyed with wonder at the outcome of it all. They were dressed in picturesque kimonos. The girls had been up all night and their bedtime coincided with the zero hour of Japan's great offensive.

COMBINED JAPANESE FORCES OPEN BIG PUSH ON DEFIANT FOE

Chapei that the original Japanese attack was repulsed by the Nineteenth Army three weeks ago.

The first batch of wounded brought back from the front were thirteen Chinese who were taken to Chinese hospitals within the International Settlement. They came from the vicinity of Kiangwan, north of Chapei. United States Marines on guard at the Settlement border let them through the line.

Shells Fall Near Marines.

Soon after the opening of the artillery duel with which the action started, United States Marine headquarters said two Japanese shells fell within their area.

The Marines expressed fear that an increasing number of missiles would land in their section as the artillerymen "warmed up to their jobs."

As a result of the gradually increasing hostilities in the vicinity of Chapei the Thirty-first United States Infantry, which yesterday took over the frone line of defense facing the Chinese city, covered their sand-bag defenses to the rear of their machine-gun blockhouses with half-inch steel plates.

About noon numerous Japanese planes appeared over Chapei. They reconnoitered over wide areas to the rear of Chinese positions, apparently searching every foot of ground between Chapei and Kiangwan.

Bombers Prepare Assault.

Meanwhile Japanese airmen prepared to blast away the Chinese positions with great bombs dwarfing in explosive power anything that has been used during the hostilities here.

At the Yangtzepoo Flying Field were seen ten of the largest Japanese bombing planes loaded with these huge missiles of death and destruction. The bombs were about a yard long and a foot and a half through. They were so heavy that each plane could carry only two of them.

There was no indication when the bombers would take off but the pilots stood by ready for action. Other planes carrying six to ten smaller bombs were kept warmed up.

Japanese Patience Exhausted.

Lieut. Gen. Kenkichi Uyeda, commanding officer of the Japanese army forces, told an Associated Press correspondent in his headquarters at 8 a. m.: "The end of our patience has been reached. We received no answer from the National government to our ultimatum and at 7 a. m. the Chinese military remained in their front lines.

"We gave them 30 minutes' grace this morning in which the National government might reply to our ultimatum and the Chinese troops might leave their positions, but they remained and the National government remains silent," the general continued.

"Now we must take offensive action."

Gen. Uyeda's statement was verbal and had not been prepared. A member of his staff followed it up by remarking:

"We hope you will cable this to America, emphasizing that we gave them (meaning the Chinese) 30 minutes' grace."

Americans Evacuate Area.

On the advice of Consul General Edwin S. Cunningham, hundreds of Americans living close to the lines between here and Woosung were convoyed out of the areas by police and firemen. Others made their way to safety alone and sought habitations where the danger of falling shells was not so great.

More than 100 Chinese patients in St. Luke's Hospital in Hongkew were carried out in ambulances, together with 55 nurses and members of the hospital staff. The evacuation was directed by Dr. J. C. McCracken, once a well-known football player at the University of Pennsylvania. The hospital is partially supported by his alma mater.

The register at the American consulate general showed there were 150 Americans living in Hongkew, 12 in the Yangtzepoo district and 18 at the University of Shanghai, between Kiangwan and Woosung, but these records were not complete. A number of retired American sailors, marines and soldiers have lived in Hongkew for years, but have not registered.

Previously, consular officials had considered the possibility of a wholesale evacuation of women and children from the settlement to American warships in the Whangpoo River, but it was decided that the danger was not sufficient to warrant such measures.

At the same time, American Marines and soldiers and American members of the Volunteer Defense Corps were in a precarious situation along the northwestern frontier of the settlement. The artillery attack from Japanese batteries in Hongkew found them almost in the direct line of fire.

One hundred shells earlier had fallen along Soochow Creek since the Americans have been on patrol in that area, Marine officers said, and only good luck has saved some of the men from death. In addition the Chinese troops across the creek have mined their front line trenches with the intention of blowing them up if it becomes necessary.

Foreign forces of upward of 10,000 men were considered sufficient to ward off any attack from either side or obstruct any retreat. The American defenders are entrenched along a line of machine gun blockhouses and sandbags which make them nearly invulnerable.

They have posted machine guns on the roofs of houses immediately behind their positions and sentries are stationed at the intersections of the blockhouse. They expressed keen satisfaction with their unobstructed view of the battleground, saying "at last we are where there is likely to be some action."

Brisbane, Australia (Saturday), Feb. 20 (U.P.).—It was understood today that extended shore leaves in the Royal Australian navy have been curtailed and naval reservists ordered to prepare for possible mobilization in view of the Shanghai situation.

London (Saturday), Feb. 20 (U.P.). Specific instructions were sent today to Sir Miles Lampson, British minister to China, outlining the action he should take to protect British interests at Shanghai. The instructions were not made public. They followed a night of activity in Whitehall during which the lights in foreign office, admiralty and war offices, were not extinguished.

PU-YI NAMED RULER OVER NEW REPUBLIC

Former Boy Emperor of All China Will Be Under Tokyo Direction.

Tokyo, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—A slight young Manchu who used to be the emperor of all China and Manchuria, was reported today to have been returned to power in only a fraction of his once far-flung empire.

Henry Pu-Yi, who never cared for affairs of state, was hailed by the press as the first "genshu"—sovereign chief executive—of the new Republic of Ankuo, comprising Manchuria and inner Mongolia.

Dispatches from Mukden, accompanied by pictures of the former "boy emperor" Husan Tung, said he had been made dictator for life over the government set up yesterday by Chinese officials parading under the name of the executive committee of northeastern Manchuria.

Under Japan's Direction.

It was the first time that the Japanese government had allowed his name to be used, although it had been understood for many weeks that when he was brought to Manchuria last fall his place had been selected for him.

He is expected to rule with the aid of a Chinese premier and under the direction of Japan.

But it was also reported that he had refused to assume the office unless he was made king or emperor, insisting upon a restoration of the glory of the Manchu dynasty and the "Dragon Throne," and there was some confusion as to whether he would rule as a democrat or an autocrat.

Has Been in Hiding.

Pu-yi was whisked out of Tientsin by the Japanese last fall when the effects of the Manchurian conquest threatened to spread to that city and was set up at a resort near Dairen. He has since remained in hiding and it was understood he had no desire to return to an active life.

He became emperor in 1908 at the age of 2 and abdicated four years later with the formation of the Chinese Republic. He lived within the "Forbidden City" of Peiping until 1924 when the "Christian General" Feng Yu-Hsiang turned him out.

He fled to the Japanese legation in Tientsin and there lived a quiet existence with his two wives, his sports, his music lessons and his billiards. The only cloud on his sky for years was the threat of one of his wives to divorce him because of neglect.

Gardner Calls on States To Live Within Incomes

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 19 (A.P.).—A statement of Gov. O. Max Gardner, of North Carolina, that government must live within its current income and that taxes on property must come down brought applause today from Kentucky's legislators who listened for more than an hour to his discussion of national and State problems.

DE VALERA WINNER OF DAIL'S CONTROL

fices and party headquarters all night.

Meanwhile, the governor general issued a proclamation postponing the meeting of the Dail from March 2 to March 9 because of the delay in the election in the Sligo-Leitrim constituency, which was postponed because of a political assassination.

De Valera reiterated his intention of following the policy outlined in the Fianna Fail election manifesto, if the final tabulation of the outstanding parliamentary seats definitely gives him victory.

Program Demands Separation.

That program, briefly, is as follows:

1. Separation of the Irish Free State from the British Empire.

2. Abolition of the oath of allegiance to King George.

3. Repudiation of $25,000,000 in annual payments to Great Britain by Irish farmers since "the treaty" made them peasant proprietors.

4. Development of a home market for Irish Free State products, coupled with the fostering of Saorstat industries.

5. The erection of high tariff walls against Great Britain to protect Saorstat business and reduce with adverse trade balance with England.

Thousands of poor Saorstat farmers look forward hopefully tonight to repudiation of the debt forced upon them by Great Britain. De Valera has persistently focussed attention on the fact that the average Irish citizen's debt to Great Britain is greater than the average German's reparations obligations. He promised, as one of his first acts after attaining parliamentary control, to stop sending the land payments to Britain and turn most of the money back to the farmers.

Altogether the Irish Free State pays Great Britain approximatley $25,000,000 a year in various obligations. The land annuities alone account for $15,000,000, and of this sum $5,000,000 a year goes to pay for damage done in the five-year rebellion against the British crown, which started with the "bloody Easter" Sunday of 1916.

M. Tardieu said that under the present conditions he did not expect to return to the disarmament conference at Geneva.

Friends who boarded the liner Oriente with the officer said he had materially improved since he left Cuba, and hospital authorities said last night that he stood the trip well and his condition was good.

Gen. Crowder, who is 73 years old, has been in failing health for a year. His condition became aggravated during his visit to Cuba, where he was formerly United States Ambassador.

Pittsburgh Hears He Will Not Go to Convention at Chicago.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—The Sun-Telegraph says today that Andrew W. Mellon, Ambassador to Great Britain, will not go to the Republican national convention as a delegate at large from Pennsylvania.

Mellon plans to leave for England in about three weeks. Before he goes, the newspaper says, he will announce his withdrawal as a candidate for delegate, a position for which he was slated. The Sun-Telegraph says Mellon feels he will be too busy in England to return to America for the convention.

Although the ambassador's nephew, W. L. Mellon, has definitely announced his retirement from politics, the paper says the delegate at large position may go to him.

Nanking, China, Feb 19 (A.P.).—The Chinese government virtually rejected tonight the Japanese ultimatum calling for evacuation of the Nineteenth route army from the Shanghai battlefront.

Premier Wang Ching-Wei declared formally that Chinese troops would not withdraw beyond a 12-mile radius of the city unless the Japanese forces did likewise—a proposal which the invaders have repeatedly turned down.

The retirement of the Chinese alone was a demand which the government could not accept, he said, and its military commanders on the front had been so instructed.

The proposal that the Chinese dismantle the fortifications at Woosung and Paoshan and the arsenal at Lunkwha was equally unacceptable in his view and the stipulation that Japanese airplanes should observe the evacuation was unthinkable. If such a move were made, he added, it would have to be by neutral parties.

Four States Hunt For Lost Banker

Cashier of Closed Firm at Franklin, W. Va., Missing Eight Days.

Franklin, W. Va., Feb. 19.—Police of four States have been asked to look for Irving Ritchie, cashier of the closed Farmers Bank of Pendleton, who has been missing for eight days. The search was started at the instance of City Solicitor Charles Ritchie, of Charleston, W. Va. Descriptions of the missing man were sent to Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Delaware officials.

Ritchie, 55, was reported last seen at Ridgely, Md., where a daughter lives. He left here February 1 and told his family he was going to Baltimore to confer with Federal Reserve officials in an effort to arrange for reopening his bank here, which was closed December 31, 1931, the largest of three banks in this county, all now closed.

He said he would probably be absent a week or ten days. Absence of information from him has caused his family, including Mrs. Ritchie and two daughters, anxiety. They fear he has met with foul play or serious accident. Their inquiries as to his whereabouts have been fruitless, it was said.

CRITIC FAILS TO HALT CARDOZO'S APPROVAL

(Associated Press.)

A Senate subcommittee's reaction to charges that Judge Benjamin N. Cardozo had shown "gross injustice" in dealing with a forgery case was quick and unanimous approval yesterday of his nomination to the Supreme Court.

It dismissed a complaint by William H. Anderson, former superintendent of the New York Antisaloon League, who served a term in Sing Sing after conviction on charges of altering the books of the league.

Anderson, now general secretary of the American Protestant Alliance, testified under oath before the subcommittee in a room crowded with spectators and newspapermen.

He said he was convicted of a "fictitious crime called 'third degree forgery,'" and that the action of Judge Cardozo in refusing him bail while awaiting the decision of the New York Supreme Court, was "more worthy of the most slippery police court pettifogger than of a prospective justice of the Supreme Court of the United States."

The judiciary subcommittee, composed of Senators Robinson, Indiana, and Schall, Minnesota, Republicans; and Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, attached so little weight to Anderson's claims that it took only a few minutes after he was through to decide on a favorable report to the full committee. It in turn will report to the Senate.

The only other protest was withdrawn yesterday. O. R. Miller, superintendent of the New York Civic League, had asserted before the nomination that to name Mr. Cardozo would be an "affront to the dry sentiment" in New York. In a letter placed in the record yesterday he said he presumed after all that Mr. Cardozo was a "great lawyer" and he wished to withdraw his complaint.

Anderson also criticized other judges, who heard his case, including Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York), who served on the Supreme Court of New York before coming to the Senate.

The witness said Mr. Wagner had denied him a writ of reasonable doubt and as a result had been "promoted to the Senate by Tammany."

Senator Ashurst resented the reflection on Wagner, saying he was one of the ablest members of the Senate and a man of high judicial ability.

"We hit hard in the Senate but we never hit below the belt," he cautioned the witness.

SENATOR McNARY.

SENATOR CHARLES L. McNARY (Republican), of Oregon, is unique among the senators in that he twice was appointed to fill Senate vacancies before he took to the Senate the might of his election by the people.

A death, not unique in the history of the Senate, resulted in his first appointment; a resignation which, if not unique, approaches that category, sent young Judge McNary to the Senate again by appointment, and the votes of his fellow Oregonians has kept him there since November, 1918, when the voters got their first chance to pass on him.

A Republican among Republicans, a leader of the so-called farm bloc, has been Senator McNary. Yet if one look all around the Senate one would certainly pick him out last as a leader of the farm bloc.

Quick moving, of that spare, wiry build which lends itself to dandyism but might just as well lend itself to efficient grace in the squared circle, Senator McNary has become something like the mop-up squad. He it is who lays down the law about adjourning or recessing and the time for reconvening. He is assistant Republican leader, or whip. The big, genial Jim Watson, the Republican leader, leaves it to McNary.

Senator McNary is a lawyer by profession. He was a judge in Oregon. That probably accounts, in part, for his expression and manner, and he seems still to carry about him that air of invulnerable and condescending authority judges so often assume.

He was born on a farm near Salem, Oreg., on June 12, 1874. He was the dean of the Willamette College of Law. He was active in State politics, and was chairman of the Republican State central committee when he first was appointed to the Senate. In the meantime he had done other things, including holding down the job of associate justice of the State Supreme Court.

Jack Garner Stirs Alarm By Shaking Satan's Bells

By JOHN J. DALY

HEAVEN protect us!

Speaker John N. Garner, speaking in the vernacular, calls for the ringing of certain old bells that have not sounded for some time in the sanctuary of Congress—where all has been harmonious these peaceful days and nights, with the somnolence of the Potomac hanging over it.

"Hell's bells!" screams the Speaker, signaling for the bells to ring out the clarion call to action. "That's all I've got to say."

It is enough.

Whenever any one pulls the bell-cord that rings the raucous alarm on the doorway of Hades, it will be, in the words of the seafaring gentry, time to tell the Captain.

A peaceful old earth it is until the bells of Abaddon start ringing. Bridal bells, wedding bells, church bells on the Sabbath, dinner bells, yes—but, lay off these alarms from the nether regions.

* * * *

"The bells of hell go ting-a-ling-a-ling
For you, but not for me;
For me the angels sing-a-ling-a-ling
Through all eternity.
O, Death, where is thy sting-a-ling-a-ling,
O, Grave, thy victory?
The bells of hell go ting-a-ling-a-ling
For you, but not for me!"

With Satan's bells ringing over the dome, all harmony between the two great political parties will disappear as each man runs to cover. The hand of the infernal bell-ringer will bring confusion into the land. What the Nation needs more than anything is silence, and mighty little of that.

* * * *

THE blatant bells, the noise, the din, the racket of politicians awakened by Pluto's bells will stir unhappy thoughts at a time when men want to meditate and ponder over the situation.

This is no time to awaken bedlam! Just when a rosy complexion was creeping over the countenance of the Nation, a florid glow not unlike the ruddy cheeks of the Lone Star of Texas himself, a pallor strikes the people as the speaker calls for the ringing of the satanic carillon—on which, by the way, there is a stiff tariff.

The order of the moment is for surcease of sorrow, if possible. Should the hellhounds of politics be let loose in the land, ringing their hideous bells, we might just as well be in Shanghai.

Politics may make strange bedfellows, but nobody can sleep with the bells of hell going ting-a-ling-a-ling.

Have a heart, Speaker Jack!

REORGANIZING PLAN IS SPURRED IN HOUSE

Two Bills Introduced Urging Authority for Hoover to Start on Program.

The first of the many reorganization plans, advanced with a political eye to economy, will reach a showdown in the House expenditures committee this morning, when a vote is taken on the Democratic-sponsored bill to consolidate Army and Navy into one Department of National Defense.

At the same executive session, Chairman John J. Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, expects to take up governmental reorganization proposals, put forward by President Hoover. Chairman Cochran hopes to make his committee adjudicator of any consolidation or reorganization program that may be considered.

He has the backing of Speaker John N. Garner in this move. The latter believes the committee will support Mr. Cochran and report out the Army-Navy consolidation bill, despite opposition of Secretary of War Hurley and Secretary of the Navy Adams.

Two Reorganization Bills

Meanwhile, two midwestern Republicans have introduced bills to give the President the authority he asks to reorganize government activities in the interest of economy.

A party-sponsored resolution to empower the chief executive to abolish, combine or transfer any commission, bureau or other government divisions by executive order, was introduced yesterday by Representative William P. Holladay, (Republican), Illinois.

A second bill was introduced by Representative C. William Ramseyer (Republican), Iowa, to make any reorganization move by the President contingent on recommendations made by a reorganization board of five members, two representatives, two senators and a presidential appointee confirmed by the Senate.

Inquiry Body Sought.

Tuesday Democrats sponsored a resolution for appointment of a committee of five to make a survey and report on superfluous Federal offices. The same day Speaker Garner announced he had no objection to Chairman Cochran's expenditures committee taking over this task, inasmuch as it was already launched on a study of War and Navy overlappings, Mr. Cochran indicated he intended to do so.

A resolution introduced by Representative Lewis W. Douglas (Democrat), Arizona, would authorize an "economy committee" of seven House members, who would cooperate with the appropriations and expenditures committees in working out reorganization.

At least one effort yesterday was made to smooth over party friction caused by rival reorganization plans. Representative William I. Nolan (Republican), Minnesota, said reorganization was not a party question but "a common sense business question."

"If anything worth while is to be accomplished, we must follow the President's suggestions," he said.

Zoo Men Relieved As N'Gi Improves

Gorilla, Victim of Cold, Responds to Efforts of Specialists.

Officials and keepers at the National Zoo breathed a little more easily last night as N'Gi, favorite of the Zoo's animal family, appeared to be responding to the treatment of two specialists called in to pull him through the severe cold he has contracted. N'Gi is the 6-year-old gorilla and a great favorite with the children who flock to the Zoo.

Colds to a baby gorilla are much like smallpox to an Indian, and consequently when N'Gi's nose starts running, it is a cause for great alarm among his keepers. N'Gi is one of the very few gorillas in captivity and is admittedly the best specimen at any zoo.

N'Gi is being kept in seclusion as much as possible. He is being given ultra-violet ray treatment, and it was said last night that he appears much improved. Dr. N. E. Buckingham, veterinarian, and Dr. John C. Echhardt, child specialist, are prescribing for him.

much luck. Jobs are hard to get. Try and see."

This man was turned over to the relief societies. A representative of those groups was present and at times assisted in the questioning.

Two youths were brought in together. Both attempted voluby to assume responsibility. One was working, they said, and supporting the other while he looked for work. They were released, but warned not to repeat the offense.

"Thank you sir," said the one who had a job, "but please don't tell my boss."

A number of former service men were in the crowd. Almost all of the men brought in had small sums of money in their pockets.

Gen. Glassford's decision to war against panhandlers came after a conference with Community Chest and other relief organization officials.

"This initiates an action," said the instructions to the force, "which will clear the streets of this menace."

The action was taken, he said, because the Police Department with "tentacles all over the city" and "its close contact with social conditions" should be able to determine those actually in need and those who year by year make their way through begging.

Gasoline Bootlegger Sentenced to 3 Years

Chicago, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—Abe Allen the first man to be convicted in Illinois' drive on "gasoline bootleggers," was sentenced to three years in the house of correction. Judge John Prystalski also fined Allen $3,000 and ordered that he work out the fine if it were not paid promptly.

Allen was formerly head of the Midway Refining Co., of South Holland, Ill. The State charged that he had large quantities of gasoline shipped from Indiana, defrauding Illinois by not paying the gasoline tax.

BANK SAYS $100,000 PERU DEAL PRIVATE

(Associated Press.)

The Senate finance committee yesterday made public correspondence detailing unsuccessful efforts to obtain an explanation of payments by the National City Bank, the Chase National Bank and the Royal Bank of Canada to Juan Leguia, son of the former President of Peru.

The payments, totaling almost $100,000, were revealed Thursday by the committee. It made public Leguia's bank account with J. & W. Seligman & Co., of New York.

The National City Bank and the Royal Bank of Canada were not asked for explanations, but Henry C. Breck, of the Seligman Co., said his concern had "no knowledge of the source" of the deposits "other than that these banks sent the money to us for Leguia's credit."

The committee also made public a letter from O. J. Schmidlapp, vice president of the Chase National, saying the $10,000 it paid into Leguia's account were transactions concerning "confidential relations with our foreign correspondent."

Johnson Asks Explanation.

Schmidlapp's letter written in reply to a request from Senator Johnson (Republican), California, during the committee's investigation of foreign loans for an explanation of the payments, said in part:

"We received cable instructions from our correspondent, Banco del Peru y Londres, Lima, Perus, to pay, on April 17, $2,000 and on April 25 to pay $8,000 to J. and W. Seligman & Co., New York, for account of Juan Leguia.

"These transactions concern confidential relations with our foreign correspondent and we trust will not be made a part of the public record of your committee's hearing. The information is given to you in confidence."

"Senator Johnson insists that your letter, 29th instant regarding Leguia account be made public. Kindly wire authority to print same in hearings Otherwise I am of the opinion you will be requested to appear before the committee to give testimony with reference thereto."

Source of Deposits Vague.

Schmidlapp later said his bank had no objections if the committee insisted upon making the letter public.

Johnson also wrote to Seligman & Co. asking for an explanation of the Leguia account, pointing out specifically the Chase payment of $10,000, a credit of $4,000 from the Chase subsidiary, the Equitable Trust Co.; and payments of $60,956 by the National City Bank and $22,700 by the Royal Bank of Canada.

Breck replied that these "all represent payments made to us from time to time by these banks for the credit of his account." But adding he had no knowledge of their source.

He also said that the money paid into Leguia's account included "substantial deposits of which we have no knowledge." The total of these extra deposits was $49,890.15, bringing the grand total to $563,947.73, including $415,000, paid by the Seligman Co. for negotiating a $100,000,000 loan to Peru.

M'ADOO FOR GARNER HELD ROOSEVELT AID

But Speaker's Supporters Say Candidacy Will Be Greatly Aided.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

A good break for Roosevelt and a dubious compliment for Garner.

Paradoxical as it sounds, that is one interpretation that is placed on William G. McAdoo's pronouncement for Speaker John N. Garner. It is the interpretation of men on Capitol Hill who are close to Roosevelt and who are actively at work to win the Democratic presidential nomination for him.

McAdoo, by coming out for Garner, they say, has relieved the Roosevelt supporters of a real worry. The Roosevelt people have resented the suggestion that their candidate is being backed by the same forces that were behind McAdoo in the Madison Square Garden convention of 1924. That Roosevelt is being backed largely by those forces is, of course, true. Nevertheless, the Roosevelt men don't like to be reminded of it. The suggestion militates against the New York governor's lining up people who were opposed to McAdoo in 1924. And unless he can line up the erstwhile anti-McAdoo people, Roosevelt is whipped.

Dates Back to K. K. K. Row.

In a way, it all goes back to the bitter fight that was staged in Madison Square Garden over the Ku Klux Klan. At that time, the Klan was at the peak of its strength and at the convention, the Klan was a major issue.

There was one element, composed largely of the supporters of Alfred E. Smith, which favored the adoption of a "religious liberty" plank that would denounce the Ku Klux Klan by name.

There was another element, composed largely of the supporters of McAdoo and led by the late William Jennings Bryan, which insisted on leaving out the words Ku Klux Klan.

In the end the McAdoo people won; the Klan was not mentioned in the plank. The bitterness generated in that fight, however, lasted throughout the four weeks of the convention, and made impossible the selection of either Smith or McAdoo.

If the Roosevelt people are gratified, the question arises: How do Garner's friends feel about the McAdoo indorsement?

Two of the Speaker's fellow Texan's—Senator Tom Connally and Representative Thomas L. Blanton—expressed the opinion yesterday that the McAdoo statement would greatly help Garner's candidacy.

Others Express Doubt.

There were some others, however, who, in private conversation, expressed doubt. One of the chief obstacles in Garner's path right now, they say, is the fact that his home State of Texas bolted the Democratic party in 1928 and voted for Herbert Hoover. It is conceded that religious bigotry had a lot to do with it—that and prohibition.

What Garner's friends are anxious to do is to inform the North of Garner's valiant fight for Smith in 1928, of his sincere tolerance, and of his position on prohibition. It is not being advertised very much now, but Garner voted against the eighteenth amendment.

The McAdoo statement came up for discussion yesterday while the House was debating a challenge issued the day before to Bishop James Cannon, jr., by Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, who urged the bishop to press for an early trial of his libel suit against the representative.

When the debate turned to Garner and McAdoo, Representative John Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, said that while Garner had voted against the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act, he had voted for the "notorious five and ten" law.

"We can realize," he said, "why the father of the eighteenth amendment, Senator Sheppard, and the stepfather, William G. McAdoo, came out for him."

Replying, Mr. Blanton said:

"I want to call the attention of the country to this, that William Randolph Hearst, a notorious wet, indorses the man I nominated, and this morning one of the great drys of the United States, William G. McAdoo, indorsed him. So you see he has the indorsement of the wets and the drys. It is an economic question."

Recalling that Lincoln, feeling that he was a failure, had to be urged to run again, Wood said:

"I believe that if the people use good judgment now they won't change horses in the middle of a stream."

Representative Blanton recalled that Wood in 1919 referred to Hoover as "the most extravagant luxury ever fastened upon the American people."

Wood recalled that Representative Rainey, of Illinois, now the Democratic floor leader, was praising Hoover at that time.

"That was before he found him out," said Blanton.

"That was before I found him out, too," Wood said.

Wood contended that President Woodrow Wilson had set the record in creating commissions, setting up 150 as against 44 for Hoover.

Choice of Allen Hit.

In a statement issued through the Democratic national committee, Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, criticized President Hoover for appointing former Senator Henry Allen, of Kansas, to a place on the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Harrison said that the appointment was a purely political one, made "because Mr. Allen was President Hoover's official press agent during the 1928 campaign."

In the future, Harrison predicted, Allen will barnstorm the country making speeches directing the country's attention "to the miraculous achievements of the President in his handling of the country's financial and industrial dilemma."

Berlin Acts to Stop Drain of Alien Cash

Emergency Degree to End Also Influx of Marks From Abroad.

Berlin, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—A new emergency decree was promulgated today to prevent continued drain of foreign currencies and an influx of marks from abroad. In announcing the new regulation, the government says loopholes had been found in the previous regulations and were being used for evasion.

The new decree further tightened restrictions on currency transactions. Readmittances from abroad or proceeds from sales of securities on real estate here can only be credited on specially restricted accounts.

The same restriction applies to German inheritances which go to foreigners. German exporters are strictly required to show how they receive settlements of their accounts and certain abuses in connection with effecting insurances in foreign currences also will be stopped.

Sedative Believed Cook Death Cause

Gibraltar, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—Although an analysis of the viscera of Elizabeth Barrett Cook, the 20-year-old Boston heiress, who died mysteriously aboard the liner Chinese Prince, had not been completed tonight, it was indicated by the authorities that she probably died of a German drug used as a sleeping potion.

The authorities said the young woman probably did not succumb either to pneumonia or ether as has been previously conjectured.

Miss Cook died en route from Naples to the United States after receiving a fake cablegram saying her fiance, Arnold St. George, of Boston, was dead and advising her not to return to the United States. The body was taken ashore here and an investigation ordered.

CRISP WOULD STOP FOREIGN TAX SAVING

Wants Exemptions to Corporations for Payments Abroad Ended.

An increase of $35,000,000 in Federal revenue by prohibiting American corporations from deducting taxes paid abroad from their domestic income tax returns is under consideration by the House ways and means committee.

Such a step was advocated yesterday by Acting Chairman Crisp as the committee drafting the new tax bill heard the views of the Treasury expressed by Undersecretary Ballantine.

At present, American concerns with branches in foreign countries are allowed to deduct from Federal taxes the amount of taxes paid to foreign governments. Often the high taxes paid in other countries amount to more than the 12 per cent corporation taxes paid in this country and the United States gets nothing.

The Georgia Democrat proposed that the amount of taxes paid to foreign governments be deducted not from the income tax, but from the gross income.

Americans paying taxes in this country and those paying taxes in foreign countries would be placed on an equal footing, Crisp said, explaining that State, county and local taxes are not deducted from the income tax but from the gross income.

He estimated the change would increase the revenue between $35,000,000 and $40,000,000 annually.

Ballantine informed Crisp the Treasury would submit a manufactures sales tax bill Tuesday when Secretary Mills confers with the committee. It had been planned to submit the proposal yesterday but Mr. Mills was unable to appear.

3 Hit U.S. Operation Of Muscle Shoals

(Associated Press.)

Three witnesses testified before the Senate agricultural committee yesterday in opposition to the Norris bill for Government operation of Muscle Shoals. H. E. Howe, of Washington, representing the American engineering council, opposed Government operation of the Government's $150,000,000 plant on the Tennessee River and called the bill introduced by Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, "unsound."

He said the Muscle Shoals plant was of no economic value to agriculture and should be frankly considered as entirely a power project. Mr. Howe said he would retain Government ownership of the plant and lease power to private industry on long term contracts.

Mercer Reynolds, of Chattanooga, a member of the Muscle Shoals commission, also opposed Government ownership, declaring it was the first step toward "the Russian system of government." William J. Fitts, Tennessee commissioner of agriculture, recommended that the commission's recommendations for farmer operation be adopted.

Liquor Importation Indorsed by Mills

Legitimate U. S. Demand for Medicinal Purposes Is Cited to Senate.

(Associated Press.)

Official indorsement of a measure which would permit importation of brandy and other spirits for medicinal uses was received by the Senate yesterday from President Hoover's newest Cabinet member—Secretary Mills of the Treasury.

At about the same time a Senate manufactures subcommittee ended six weeks of hearings on a bill which would legalize 4 per cent beer. Two of its three members are opposed to prohibition and a favorable report to the full committee is expected.

The bulging record of testimony before the committee conducting hearings on the beer bill was completed as Rufus S. Lusk, an official of the Crusaders, antiprohibition organization, appeared in advocacy of the measure and Canon William S. Chase, superintendent of the International Reform Association, opposed it.

THE NEW CINEMA OFFERINGS

PALACE

"FREAKS." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Tod Robbins' story of "Spurs," adapted to the screen by Willis Goldbeck, featuring Olga Baclanova, Leila Hyams, Wallace Ford and Roscoe Ates, supported by Henry Victor, Edward Brophy, Rose Dione, Albert Conti and a congress of bona fide sideshow monstrosities. Directed by Tod Browning. Previewed Tuesday midnight.

By NELSON B. BELL.

Whatever else may be said of this latest contribution to the growing list of "shocker" dramas, there has never been another like it. Daring in conception, repellant in much of its content and at times infinitely pathetic, "Freaks" will occasion favorable personal reaction in direct proportion to the degree of morbid curiosity, indifference to the tragedy of many of Nature's blunders and immunity from the physiological absurdities of fantastic dramaturgy with which the individual spectator is endowed.

The story is in this instance, paradoxically enough, cleverly told through the medium of an ancient device. A sideshow spieler is haranguing his patrons on the wonders of his exhibits. Coming upon a pit whose occupant can not be seen by the audience, he begins to relate the story of an object so hideous that it can not be looked upon without shrieks of horror by those of sensitive nature. The pictured action then flashes back and picks up the ballyhoo man's narrative on the circus lot where one of the sideshow midgets, engaged to one of his own kind, falls in love with Cleopatra, queen of the air, who sets in motion a murderous plot to marry him and then by slow poison cause his death so that she will inherit his fortune and be enabled to live in luxury with Hercules, the strong man.

At the wedding feast in the mess tent, Cleo is accepted as one of them by the misshapen, deformed and wholly pitiable victims of a perverse destiny, comprising one of the most ghastly assemblages of human monstrosities ever gathered together. When these malformed members of a race apart discover that one of their number is being betrayed by the "big woman" who has accepted his hand in marriage, they contrive a revenge that affords one of the most grotesque climaxes any drama ever reached. Its eerie and sinister quality is enhanced by the fact that it is enacted in a sea of mud in a driving cloudburst.

As I say, it is all a matter of taste whether the thrwarted loves, ambitions and physical aspirations of these strange people impress the spectator as valid entertainment or merely a gratuitous overemphasis of hideous affliction.

The "big people" who participate in the action of this bizarre film are catalogued in the small-type paragraph preceding these cursory observations. Among them, Olga Baclanova, as Cleopatra, and Leila Hyams, as Venus, the sideshow beauty, stand foremost, with Wallace Ford and the stammering Mr. Ates closely seconding their efforts. The freaks are played by themselves and are purely that, save for Harry and Daisy Earles, midgets, and Daisy and Violet Hilton, the San Antonio Siamese twins, who contribute something of worth to the picture's legitimate drama.

The "Follies of 1932" stage revue opens with a colorful scene in which the Chester Hale Girls execute a startlingly expository number borrowed from the Parisian music halls and once known as the "can-can." There follow intervals of song, dance and jest, contributed by Frieda and Palace, dialectitians and singers; Joyce Coles, ballerina of the first rank; the Three Pasqualas Brothers, gymnasts par excellence; Nicholas Daks and Cook and Brown, sepia hoofers.

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy in "Beau Hunks," a comedy of the Foreign Legion alive with their drolleries; the Hearst Metrotone News and a stirring orchestral and screen rendition of George M. Cohan's special Bicentennial march song, under Harry Borjes' deft baton, augment an unique bill.

COLUMBIA

"HELL DIVERS." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization, with the cooperation of the United States Navy, of an original story by Lieut. Comdr. Wead, adapted to the screen by Harvey Gates and Howard Malcolm Boland; starring Wallace Beery and Clark Gable, supported by Conrad Nagel, Dorothy Jordan, Marie Prevost, Marjorie Rambeau and Cliff Edwards. Directed by George Hill. Reviewed Friday evening by W. A. Whitney.

Opening at the naval air station at North Island, Calif., "Hell Divers" gets under way with bombing maneuvers and stunt flying that results in the first casualty. After draining the dramatic possibilities of the naval air base, a removal en masse to the U. S. S. Saratoga is made and the tour of inspection is continued, with the airplane carrier eventually reaching the Panama Canal.

It is on the Saratoga that most of the interesting shots are taken, but naval caution and the astute use of black screens and vague photography prevent the well known braking device on the deck from being too clearly demonstrated.

A Navy picture without the U. S. Dirigible Los Angeles—well, it just wouldn't be, that's all; so in comes the big cigar to make a landing for refueling. More bombing demonstrations and the ba[illegible] of the Navy's big guns. More maneuvers in the air, a broken wing, a crash, a death and two seriously injured pilots follow in quick succession. Finally, Wallace Beery, chief petty officer, reduced to mechanic, takes a plane and makes for the Saratoga in a pea-soup fog. He makes the ship, but is fatally injured in a crashing landing. The picture ends with Mr. Beery's burial at sea—a solemn and lugubrious scene.

As a picture of the air service, "Hell Divers" approximates similar and earlier productions and reveals much thrilling aerial photography. Mr. Beery offers an amusing and at times touching performance. Clark Gable, along with those mentioned in the italicized paragraph above, and Marie Prevost, John Miljan, Landers Stevens, Reed Howes, Alan Roscoe, Frank Conroy, are effective in their respective parts, none of which adds any great degree of glory to the actor.

But, please, Mr. M-G-M, why was it necessary to kill off Mr. Beery in the end, and, if that was required, why end with the shot of the sea burial? Mr. Beery is too good-hearted and valuable a character to dispense with thus, even though the act is predicated on such an impressive example of self-sacrifice.

The 109 minutes of running time allowed for but two short subsidiaries which come as welcome relief from the enforced tension of the feature's last reel. Mickey Mouse does "The Duck Hunt," proving that ducks, like worms, do sometimes turn. Paramount News is the other short.

METROPOLITAN

"THE MAN WHO PLAYED GOD." Warner Brothers' picturization of Jules Eckert Goodman's play from the short story by Gouverneur Morris, starring George Arliss, supported by Bettie Davis, Violet Heming, Ivan Simpson, Louise Closser Hale and Donald Cook. Directed by John G. Adolfi. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

Here is a splendid, interesting picture, superlatively played by the brilliant Arliss.

The business of being God is both blessed and bitter. This, Royale, the great maestro, learns standing on his high balcony looking down at the people in the park through his miraculous fieldglasses.

Having suddenly, through shock, been beset by the family inheritance of deafness, cut off by this affliction from his beloved music, and made even more remote from the young girl he loves, and who thinks she loves him, than by the mere barrier of his age, Royale almost goes under, losing completely his hitherto sturdy faith and seeking suicide as an end to an incredibly hopeless life.

Through a lucky accident, he finds that through his glasses and his hard-won ability to read lips, he can become an unknown, unsuspected party to all the tragedies and comedies going on beneath his windows. And so he plays God and finds life interesting again.

Arliss is superb as Royale. First the happy, hounded celebrity, natural, unaffected though pampered, then the bitter, broken man shut up in his "attic" room, brutal to his friends, from whom he fears pity, and finally the old Royale again with a new happiness and humanness and understanding—Arliss plays smoothly each mood, making the character so vivid and real that even his thoughts are subtly apparent. The scene in which he goes suddenly deaf is magnificently done.

But Arliss is not alone in excellence. His ever-present shadow has a rare opportunity, as Battles, and makes the most of it, with one particularly powerful and moving scene in which he pleads with Royale not to commit suicide.

Violet Heming is attractive and sympathetic though sometimes cloyingly sweet as an old friend of Royale's. Bette Davis as the young sweetheart who loves music, but thinks she loves Royale, is somewhat startling in her rapid rushes of emotion. Donald Cook is, as usual, good in a brief role, while William Janney, Grace Durkin, Raymond Milland and Dorothy Le Baire, as the boys and girls seen through the fieldglasses, all do nicely.

The Bicentennial film, "Washington, the Man and the City," should be very interesting away from home, particularly in cities where portraits of George Washington are not to the right of you, to the left of you, in front and behind. A newsreel completes the bill.

Everybody will like this program.

FOX

"SHE WANTED A MILLIONAIRE." Fox production featuring Joan Bennett, supported by Spencer Tracy, Una Merkel and James Kirkwood. Directed by John Blystone. Reviewed Friday night by Don B. Reed.

Revealing the age-old story of the small-town poor girl who wanted to relieve the financial distress of her family by marrying a rich man, this story, rumored to have been patterned after a notable case recently in the news, is entertaining and amusing. It is entertaining because it moves along at a rapid pace and is well handled by an excellent group of artists, and it is amusing because Una Merkel and Spencer Tracy are just the kind of persons at and with whom audiences like to laugh.

There is beauty galore scattered through the film, with an Atlantic City beauty pageant as one of the high lights. Despite the array of pulchritude gathered for the film, Miss Bennett suffers not one whit by comparison and her personal loveliness throughout the unfolding of the story is an attractive feature.

Jane Miller's often expressed ambition is to marry a millionaire. On the scene at the beauty pageant is Roger Norton, millionaire faker, former husband on three occasions and seeking a fourth trip down the aisle. Jane falls for his line, they are married, and Jane's family prospers accordingly. But from the wedding night on Jane learns of Norton's cruel and jealous nature. After a year of married life she has had enough.

Miss Bennett as Jane, first a brunette and later a charming blonde, does a splendid piece of work in this one. Tracy is good-natured, happy-go-lucky, with plenty of nerve, while Miss Merkel just oozes personality, pep and humor as Mary Taylor, beauty editor of the paper and chaperone for Jane on her trip to the pageant. James Kirkwood is utterly despicable as the villain with murmured cheers greeting his demise at the climax of the story. Douglas Cosgrove and Dorothy Peterson carry the roles of Janes father and mother.

The Bicentennial spirit has reached into the theater with a well-executed overture being enthusiastically received. Al Mitchell and the Fox Orchestra present "Visions of Washington" in music, aided by Bert Bagranoff and Beverly O'Brien in a vocal duet; Beverly Joyce, in a solo toe dance, and a ballet of twelve girls in colonial costume. The entire episode is presented before a drop picturing Mount Vernon and with the orchestra in frock coats and wigs. Excellently presented and splendidly done.

"Hot Java" is the Fanchon and Marco idea, handsomely mounted and marked principally by the intricate tap maneuvers of the three Samuel Brothers and the gymnastics of the Caligary Brothers. Others on the program are Armanda Chirto, soprano; Noree, a dancer; Vincent Yerro, Japanese impersonator, and the Sunkist Beauties.

Smith and Dale in a comedy called "Arabian Shrieks" and an issue of Fox Movietone News complete the bill.

Glover Park Residents Ponder Road Problems

Highway problems occupied the attention of members of the Glover Park Citizens Association last night before the organization adjourned its meeting in the auditorium of the Industrial Home School for a card party.

A resolution was adopted urging that Calvert street be extended through Fortieth street northwest. It was pointd out that extension of this street would provide a thoroughfare to Wesley Heights for students of the Benjamin Stoddard School living in that neighborhood. The association also urged that an excavation near the school, at Thirty-ninth and Calvert streets northwest, be filled in for the protection of pupils.

RIALTO

"MURDERS IN THE RUE MORGUE." Universal picturization of the story by Edgar Allan Poe, adapted to the screen by Tom Reed and Dale Van Every, featuring Sidney Fox and Bela Lugosi, supported by Leon Waycoff, Bert Roach, Betty Ross Clarke, Brandon Hurst and extensive ensemble. Directed by Robert Florey. Previewed Monday morning.

By NELSON B. BELL.

Neither so subtle as "Dracula" nor so viciously brutal as "Frankenstein," this latest addition to the season's succession of "horror" pictures still is sufficiently ominous in its developments and thrilling in its climaxes to chill the blood of all but those stolid folk who can not muster a nerve among them!

It is an extremely loose translation of the Poe story that we have here. The preliminary situation of the original fiction, on the screen, is made the final climacteric moment of the play. The filmed sequences begin with a visit to the varied exhibitions of a carnival company playing in a Paris side street. It is here that we meet Dr. Mirakle and his giant gorilla, Erik, who takes a sudden fancy to a sweet and innocent maiden attending the carnival as a lark. Dr. Mirakle, a charlatan in search of definite authentication of the theory of evolution, has a mania for blood tests to find the proper life fluid for fusion with that of his supposedly arboreal ancestor of the human race.

From this situation are derived the suspense, the constant threat of catastrophe and the final tragic climax that place this subject definitely in the category with "Dracula," "Frankenstein," "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde," and in modified degree, "Freaks."

The sinister effect of the unremitting quest for subjects for blood tests on the part of Dr. Mirakle is heightened by the constant realization that the victim most coveted is the demure young woman impersonated with such ingenuous charm by Sidney Fox, remembered for so delightful a portrayal in "Strictly Dishonorable." Her ever-vigilant guardian, the young doctor who eventually solves the mystery of the murders in the Rue Morgue, is played with conviction and earnestness by Leon Waycoff and his fellow student by Bert Roach. Bela Lugosi is as nearly the dire menace he was as Count Dracula as a less skillfully drawn character will permit. Many others in the long cast acquit themselves creditably.

Despite its occasionally tawdry passages, "Murders in the Rue Morgue" yesterday demonstrated a tenacious hold upon public imagination by surpassing both "Dracula" and "Frankenstein" in the volume of its first day's attendance.

The program is augmented by an hilariously amusing comedy, "Sea Soldiers' Sweeties," in which "Slim" Summerville indulges his quaint sense of humor, assisted by the belligerent and bulky Mr. Eddie Gribbon and a considerable supporting cast, and a new issue of the Universal News, with Graham McNamee explaining the items of current interest picked up by the roving eye of the camera.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

REFUSAL to pay a bonus of $2,400 to the comedian who broke the continuous long-run record at the Palace Theater, in New York, bids fair to start a vaudeville war that in the end may cost hundreds of thousands of dollars to the people who declined to meet his terms.

The whole thing started last summer when Lou Holtz, with Kate Smith on the bill, incidentally, hung up a new record for duration and attendance at the Palace. At the end of the run, Holtz was tendered a four-week renewal. He agreed to sign if a bonus of $2,400 was paid him, but the moguls turned thumbs down.

Now Holtz has stepped out and organized his own show, with Lyda Roberti, the Boswell Sisters and Vincent Lopez orchestra among his stars.

To meet the competition, the Palace—prior to the fire that temporarily wrecked its stage—was forced to raise its ante and put in bills that cost plenty money. For example, at the time the fire broke out, Sophie Tucker, Smith and Dale, Bill Robinson and a complete Harlem revue were billed at the Palace. That runs into fancy overhead and heavy drains on the old bankroll—if any.

And that isn't all. Noting the success of the Holtz venture, George Jessel has decided to go and do likewise. He and Eddie Cantor ran forever at the Palace, too. So Jessel is organizing a troupe in which he will serve as master of ceremonies and which will include Rusa Columbo, Pola Negri, Burns and Allen and Irving Aaronson's orchestra. The Jessel company will play Newark, Pittsburgh and Cleveland before injecting itself into the Broadway fracas.

The effects of the "war" do not restrict themselves to vaudeville. The competition has had the result of lowering some of the musical comedy admission scales from $6.60 to $4.40 top and a few even so low as $3.

The cash customer should kick about that!

First actual fight pictures of the Sino-Japanese conflict will be seen for the first time in Washington today as a result of the daring of the intrepid cameramen of the Paramount Sound News, who jeopardized their lives to get the views, and the record flight of Maj. John A. MacReady to bring these pictures to American audiences.

The pictures, which will be on view at the Metropolitan Theater, were rushed from the battle zone to California by fast boat, picked up by MacReady, and whisked away to Cheyenne, Wyo., where Maj. Doolittle grabbed the negative and flew it to New York.

A squad of motorcycle police cleared the way for the films to the laboratory, where they were incorporated in the latest issue of the Paramount Sound News. They were rushed from the laboratory direct to Washington.

As long as we are on this Warner business, you may be interested to know that Thomas P. Littlepage, vice president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, will deliver a short introductory speech preceding the presentation of the Warner Brothers' Bicentennial film, "Washington, the Man and the Capital," this afternoon at approximately 3:30 o'clock in the Earle Theater. "Washington, the Man and the Capital," was produced with the cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce and the Bicentennial Commission.

It will be presenjed at the Earle, with a specially arranged musicodance prelude by the Earle Orchestra, under the conductorship of Fred Clark.

Today, doors open at 10 a. m. at RKO-Keith's, with five de luxe performances scheduled. The same will be true on Monday, Washington's birthday.

The Fox also announces five de luxe presentations on Monday, with doors opening at 9:50 a. m.

For the edification of visitors as well as resident celebrators of the inauguration of the Bicentennial observance, Walter Von Herbulis has arranged for the presentation of what he terms "a $4.40 floor show" at his Club Michel. With Marty Rubin as master of ceremonies and Pete Macias and his band to play for dancing, entertainment runs wild nightly on Thomas Circle from 10 p. m. to 3 a. m., except Saturday—when it is rampant until 4 a. m.

It was Wally Decker, manager of the "Hacienda" Idea, at the Fox last week, who reminded me of one of Fanchon and Marco's little deeds of kindness and gratitude.

Years ago Tait's Restaurant was the smartest and best known eating place in San Francisco. Its owner was reputed to be worth a fortune—and probably was. When Fanchon and Marco were just starting out as a team of ballroom dancers, they applied to Tait for an engagement at his famous establishment—and got it. As the years passed, they moved on up and finally became the world's largest producers of stage unit shows.

As the years passed, also, the Tait fortune dwindled and finally disappeared altogether. In desperation, the original Mr. Tait, of the fabulous eatery of an earlier era, recently presented himself at Mike Marco's office and begged for any sort of employment that would return him living expenses. He was stone broke.

Remembering those early days of struggle of his own and his sister's, Marco not only gave Tait a job, but made him a company manager at a salary of more than twice the amount he had said would do for his needs. After a little breaking in with another unit, Tait, at the age of 70, took over his own Idea and now is to be numbered among the happiest and most grateful men in America.

And now you will pardon me, please? I am beginning to show signs of becoming a sob-sister, or something!

WOMEN DEMOCRATS RAP MEMBERS HERE

Demand National Committee Rule to Unseat Leaders; Primaries Urged.

By J. B. McDONNELL.

The women took the lid off local Democratic politics yesterday and ranked Washington as one of the places in which a battle is to be fought over the man whom local delegates will vote for when Democrats meet in national convention in Chicago to name their presidential candidate. The District is entitled to six votes in the convention.

They demanded that the Democratic national committee step into District politics by way of a general rule designed to unseat recognized local Democratic leaders.

The demand was made in a letter signed by Mrs. Clara Wright Smith, as president of the District of Columbia Women's Democratic Educational Council, and was addressed to National Chairman John J. Raskob.

Opening Gun of Fight.

It was the opening gun in the fight which seems certain to be waged publicly in the District from now until the convening of the national convention.

The women's council assailed John F. Costello, Democratic national committeeman, and urged the national committee that it was improper for Mr. Costello to have said publicly the District delegates to the national convention would be pledged to the candidacy of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York.

Whether through an inadvertence or in the flush of conscious power, the council, in its letter said that "we direct the national committee" to incorporate in its call for the national convention various conditions which they thought were as much as they could ask for and hoped would be adequate to meet their aims.

Urge Primary Elections.

These included:

"A requirement that all expressions of preference for presidential candidates shall be given, and the selection of delegates and alternates made, through a primary election conducted by the party or organization in each State where such expression and election are not provided for by a state law.

"Committeemen who are hereafter to constitute the membership of the Democratic national committee and whose election is not provided for by law, shall be chosen in each State at such primary elections and the service and authority of the committeemen, however chosen, shall begin immediately upon the receipt of their credentials respectively."

Mr. Costello, veteran Democratic leader of the District, said he had no comment to make on the plea of the Women's Democratic Educational Council, beyond the statement that "whenever the ladies ask for anything we should give very careful consideration to their requests.

EASTMAN INDORSES RAYBURN RAIL BILL

Charges Roads Have Evaded Supervision by I. C. C. Congress Desired.

(Associated Press.)

An Interstate Commerce Commissioner yesterday asked a House committee for legislation he believed would prevent a repetition of "deliberate" attempts to conceal the true ownership of railroads.

Joseph B. Eastman, chairman of the commission's legislative committee, indorsed the Rayburn bill to give the Interstate Commerce Commission jurisdiction over railroad holding companies.

He charged that in several instances certain groups had "evaded" the intention of Congress to have all railroad consolidations supervised by the commission. This, he said, was achieved through holding companies.

Eastman traced activities of the Pennsylvania Railroad and the O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen brothers, who control a group of roads. Of the interests of the latter, he said:

"Here the common control of the railroad companies which is generally recognized as actual and effective has been accomplished in a way which has been most cleverly disguised.

"It has not been done through any one holding company, but through a tangled maze of holding companies which have utilized the resources of certain railroad companies, both directly and indirectly. Ultimate control seems to rest in certain individuals and banking concerns."

George L. Crooker, of Providence, R. I.; Gerrit Fort, representing the New England Traffic League, and a number of other organizations were on the stand most of the day, advocating unification of New England roads with the Eastern trunk lines.

Crooker opposed, however, the Pennsylvania Railroad's control of both the New Haven and the Boston & Maine systems.

Husband Called as Witness, Then Files Action for Divorce.

A husband who discovered his wife had married again only when the other man asked him yesterday to appear as a witness in an annulment suit aganist their common wife filed a suit for absolute divorce in Prince Georges County yesterday.

Franklin White, jr., in a petition filed through Attorney Bird H. Dolby, says that he married Rosetta G. White in 1925. In 1927, he says, she left him, and two years later married James N. Chumbris in Alexandria. Some time ago Mr. Chumbris came to Mr. White and said he planned to annul his marriage to the woman on the basis of her previous undissolved marriage to Mr. White. Mr. White then filed his suit. There is one child, a boy 4 years old.

The defendant in the suit is described as Rosetta G. White, alias Rosetta G. Wilson, alias Rosetta G. Chumbris. Her address is given as 1207 K street southeast. Mr. White asks the decree of absolute divorce on the grounds of desertion.

Girl Flees Police In 3d-Floor Leap

Anna Rose, 20, Is Hurt Seriously in Plunge; Objected to Quiz.

Rather than face the questioning of a representative of the Women's Bureau of the Police Department here, Anna Rose, 20, yesterday leaped from a third-floor window at 1457 Belmont street northwest, where her father and stepmother live, sustaining serious injuries.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Rose came to this city from Boston several months ago with the girl, police were told. About two weeks ago she disappeared, and police were asked to locate her. Yesterday Mrs. Rose encountered the girl on Fourteenth street, and persuaded her to accompany her home.

When they reached the home, however, the girl objected to talking to police, and when convinced that authorities were on the way, kicked the glass out of the window and took the 30-foot leap. She was conveyed to Garfield Hospital in the fire rescue ambulance. Physicians said last night the young woman suffered a fractured leg and ankle, broken ribs, shock and a possible fractured skull.

Smoke and Soot in Capital Hit as House Debates Coal

(Associated Press.)

A sooty, smoke-filled Washington was pictured to the House of Representatives yesterday as contributing to unemployment in the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania.

Representative Brumm, of Minersville, Pa., charged laxity of the Government in preventing a smoke nuisance from heating plants in the District of Columbia. Aside from damage to the new expensive buildings going up in the Capital, Mr. Brumm said, smoke particles are a contributing cause to "a peculiar throat and nasal disease," which he said is prevalent among Washington people.

Those in charge of the building program were accused of "failing to provide the simplest precaution" against smoke injury to the white structures. The precaution he named is the compulsory use of "smokeless" anthracite.

Mr. Brumm's statements came in the wake of an interchange with Representative LaGuardia, of New York, over unemployment conditions in the Pennsylvanian's district.

Saying he had never before seen "a situation as bad as this in Washington," he told the House that everywhere in the city, "even in apartment houses close to the White House," soot can be found on window sills. He visioned people "hacking, coughing and sneezing" from the soot in the air.

"If vast sums are to be spent to beautify this city," he asked, "why in the name of common sense don't we stop this nuisance? The District of Columbia has laws to stop this, but nobody pays any attention to them."

In addition to the burning of bituminous in the Capitol he said the Government was specifying its use in plans for new postoffices and other buildings all over the country. He said the Treasury "had attempted to put in" bituminous burning apparatus at the new Federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, at the edge of the anthracite district, and "even in a postoffice at Tamaqua, which is to be built on top of a hard coal mine," until he warned the department "there will be violence if you attempt to burn that smoky stuff" in those places.

"Patience is no longer a virtue, it seems to me," he added.

Brookhart Will Demand Investigation of Movies

(Associated Press.)

Senator Brookhart (Republican), Iowa, said yesterday he would introduce a resolution next Tuesday calling for an investigation of the motion picture industry.

The Iowan said he had "many complaints" against the industry and intended to do something about it. He did not amplify, pending a speech he will make to the Senate Tuesday.

Mrs. Hoover Receives Educators Attending Conventions Here; Mrs. Craven Hostess At Luncheon for Mrs. Wilbur

MRS. HOOVER RECEIVED yesterday afternoon the National Association of Deans of Women, and later received the National Association of Principals of Private Schools.

When the President and Mrs. Hoover make their entrance at the Bicentennial Ball on Monday evening they will be greeted by the stirring strains of "Hail to the Chief," played by the same orchestra that played for young Mr. Allan Hoover's recent holiday party at the White House.

An outstanding feature of the dance music program to be presented at the Bicentennial Ball will be "The Spirit of Mount Vernon," a waltz number composed especially for the occasion by Meyer Davis. A group of Martha Washington's favorite minuets and a medley of Virginia reels also will figure in the program as particularly appropriate to the crinolined motion picture in color to be presented at the Bicentennial ball.

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann was the ranking guest at a luncheon given yesterday at the Mayflower by Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, of Pasadena, Calif. Covers were laid for twelve.

Edwin Hill Gives Club News Hints

Hyattsville Body Addressed by Chesapeake & Potomac Information Chief.

News is like a dinner—it is better while it's hot, Edwin F. Hill, information director of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., told members of the Hyattsville Homemakers' Club yesterday.

Mr. Hill told of his experiences as a publicity man over a period of ten years, and gave hints for amateur publicity chairmen. News of organizations should be written or typewritten, double-spaced and on only one side of the paper, he said. He paid a tribute to editors, who are not "hard boiled," but are the most human persons in the world except where an attempt is made to get a fictitious story used.

Other speakers at the meeting included Miss Ethel M. Regan, county home demonstration agent, and D. H. Snyder, extension editor of the University of Maryland.

AIDING THE BUREAUCRATS.

The refusal of Democratic leaders in the House to cooperate with President Hoover in reorganization of the executive departments puts them in league with the forces of bureaucracy. Only trivial and captious objections have been raised to the President's plan. Are the House leaders afraid to consent to the abolition of useless bureaus and agencies that are now a dead weight upon the necks of taxpayers?

Representative Byrns complains because the President did not make his proposal sooner. No doubt he has forgotten that Mr. Hoover has urgently requested reorganization of the Federal service in every annual message that he has sent to Congress. As a matter of fact, Congress has indulged in several costly investigations with a view to coordinating Government boards, commissions, &c., and then has failed to approve the project because of political pressure from the bureaucrats. Knowing that the hands of Congress are tied, the President offered to share the responsibility for this important undertaking.

The serious issue involved in the steady growth and intrenchment of bureaucracy can not be obscured. President Hoover has proposed a reorganization of Federal agencies that would entail the alteration of some titles. Bureaus can not be coordinated to discontinue overlapping services without setting up chiefs to preside over them. In such cases one director would be substituted for two or more. Combination of bureaus with all of their present chiefs and personnel would be merely a concentration of bureaucracy.

Before President Hoover had prepared his message Senator George, one of the most capable Democrats in Congress, has succeeded in obtaining approval by the Senate finance committee of a measure giving the President authority to reorganize the executive departments. His bill was widely regarded as a nonpartisan project to reduce the cost and increase the efficiency of Government and to ease the burden upon taxpayers. But when an almost identical proposal came from the President the Democrats of the House sought to make a political issue of it.

In doing so they are running directly counter to a fundamental Democratic principle. They refuse to challenge bureaucracy themselves, and they will not aid the President. Members of the party who still cling to the Jeffersonian brand of Democracy will find it difficult to defend the attitude of the House leaders.

Republicans in the House are determined to do their utmost to strike an effective blow at bureaucracy, regardless of the majority attitude. If Democrats refuse to cooperate they will have to defend their stand before the electorate in the coming campaign. How can they prove that their refusal to simplify and consolidate Federal jobs and agencies is in the public interest?

HOLDING ITS OWN.

An analysis of United States foreign trade in 1931 by the Department of Commerce shows the extent to which international business has been "ruined" by the depression. It must be a great relief to American citizens who have been regaled for more than two years with oratory proclaiming the collapse of American export trade to learn that this country still sells more goods abroad than any other nation. Having been told that the Smoot-Hawley tariff act shut off imports into the United States, citizens will be surprised to discover that imports in 1931 came nearer to a balance with exports than in any year since 1923.

Politicians depend upon misleading figures to deceive the public as to international trade. For example, they point to the 35 per cent decline in the value of American cotton exports and bewail the loss of an outlet for surplus farm crops. As a matter of fact, the volume of cotton exports in 1931 increased about 5 per cent. Only the price declined, because of the world-wide depression. The same is true of many other export commodities.

It is interesting to note that the unit value of exports has not increased since 1922 and there has been a steady decline since the middle of 1925. Extension of export trade since that time represents increasing quantity. When the decline in quantity since 1929 is added to the normally shrinking unit value it gives the appearance of a drastic reduction in American foreign trade. But the actual quantity of goods sold abroad in 1931 compares favorably with the volume of exports for 1923 or even 1924.

Import commodity prices have fallen considerably more than have export prices. But the volume of imports has held up better. In 1931 imports declined only 10 per cent in quantity. The Department of Commerce report calls attention to the fact that domestic industrial production fell of 16 per cent and freight car loadings 19 per cent during the same period. In other words, the market for imports into the United States has proved to be one of the most stable in the world, in spite of the tariff. One reason why this is true is because two-thirds of all our extensive imports come in free of duty. Another reason is that purchasing power has held up better in the United States than in any other country.

Foreign trade responds to economic forces just as does any other type of business. So long as the world remains in economic doldrums commerce across the seas will not flourish. But with the first indications of renewed prosperity in the great industries of the United States and other countries trade will begin to flow in larger volume.

GENUINE RELIEF WORK.

Many of the advocates of the dole bills proposed in Congress are too intelligent not to appreciate their own disingenuousness in their attitude toward the opponents of this form of relief for the unemployed. To assume that those who support measures destined to restore credit facilities to all industry are lacking in sympathy for the unemployed is neither a just nor sincere attitude.

There may be honest differences of opinion as to the best methods of affording economic relief to the needy. The facts of experience, however, are plainly in favor of aiding the restoration of normal industrial activity as the best means of helping all classes, while the disastrous effects of doles are apparent in present-day instances. Those who believe the unemployed should be cared for locally, and that their permanent welfare can only be secured through regular work, have just as much sympathy for them as those who would extend charity with all its demoralizing ramifications.

In somewhat sharp contrast to the practical acceptation of the facts of the situation by railroad employes, President Green and a delegation of the Federation of Labor presented a memorial to the White House which was as lacking in logic and appreciation of facts as some of the effusions on Capitol Hill. The objections to direct Federal relief are not founded on feelings that are callous to distress caused by unemployment, but a sincere belief that it can be more effectively handled by States and local communities than through the wasteful methods of Government agencies.

It is vain to think that prosperity can be restored by distributing billions by providing temporary jobs and unproductive and unnecessary work. Money thus spent must be restored to the Treasury through taxation. It is equally misleading to pretend that the relief to be given to railroads, industry, trade and agriculture is intended for the sole benefit of these institutions as such. These organizations are the agencies for employment of labor. The logical and proper manner of aiding the people is by helping business to give workers their jobs.

Labor leaders above all should realize the truth of this, and not be misled into thinking that any real relief would come from a temporary handout in the shape of a Federal dole. To supplant the thousands of organizations and millions of private workers who are today helping the idle would entail ruinous appropriations and necessitate the creation of such an expensive bureaucracy for its administration as the Nation has never seen—and then all the money spent would all have to be paid back in taxes. Care for the unemployed by their own home people and loans from the Government to help the return of industrial activity offer the sensible and practical way out of the present situation.

THE PROBLEM OF MEMEL.

When the disposition of Memel was discussed at Versailles it was remarked that despite the small size of its territory this bit of land had great potentialities as a trouble-maker. Due primarily to the varied and mixed population, internal difficulties result and each racial faction endeavors to assert its rights. The most important groups, the Germans and Lithuanians, by their recent differences have again brought Memel into the limelight. In the midst of its many other troubles the League of Nations is forced to consider the problems of this little territory.

Since the beginning Memel has been a sore spot. When the peace treaties detached it and Danzig from Germany it was thought that it would become a Lithuanian port. But when the attempt to give it to Lithuania was made both France and Poland objected, and then Germany insisted that the large German population was not properly protected. Russia also came forward with a demand that its rights to the use of the port should be properly guaranteed.

The ambassadors' conference in 1922 tried to settle Memel's status by giving it home rule, but after two years of waiting for the project to materialize the people of Memel revolted and defied the conference. Then followed the agreement which gave the territory to Lithuania, with the condition that Poland should have the freedom of the port for shipping. This was ended a few days ago when the Lithuanian government deposed the German president, Herr Boettscher, accusing him of treason. The result of this act in Germany was that the Nationalist party demanded that the government at Berlin take stern measures to protect its nationals without waiting to make "vain protests to the League of Nations."

Formerly Memel was the most easterly port of the German empire. Situated at the mouth of the Niemen, it provided a natural outlet for Lithuania, Poland and western Russia. The Niemen, which is one of the chief rivers emptying into the Baltic, serves Lithuania not only as a means of transportation but also for irrigation. Poland made a strong bid for Memel when it found that it was not to get Danzig by the treaties, yet it has made little effort to use the port in conjunction with Lithuania, preferring instead to build up its own port of Gdynia. Russia has not used this outlet to any great extent, and without her Baltic provinces it is of little use to Germany. Lithuania, therefore, is endeavoring to make it a purely Lithuanian port, citing that it is essential to her progress as a nation as an outlet to the sea.

SHORT SELLING CURBED.

It is apparent that the New York Stock Exchange has its ear to the ground. Bear raids upon stock values have produced repercussions throughout the country. Congress has taken note of abuses that have developed on the exchange, and frequent demands for the abolition of all short selling are heard. Wall street is apprehensive lest Congress take a hand in regulating it. Cautious moves and gestures toward self-purification are being made.

Not long ago Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, took steps to investigate short selling. Statistics on a number of stocks that have been sold short in large volume were made public. Now the exchange has come forth with a new ruling that its members may not lend securities held on margins for customers unless they obtain a separate authorization in writing. At present such stocks are lent for short selling under a general agreement between brokers and customers. After April 1 no stock can be used for short selling without the owner's specific approval.

What effect this ruling will have on the volume of short selling is not certain. Wide fluctuations in the securities markets on Friday suggest that the professionals are puzzled. The ruling is significant, however, in that it constitutes a gesture on the part of the exchange toward setting its own house in order. Certainly, discontinuance of the practice of lending stock to bear raiders without the consent of the owner is a step in the right direction.

Wall street is in a better position to curb bear raiding than is Congress if it chooses to act. This move gives encouragement that the stock exchange sees the handwriting on the wall. If it fails to act on that warning Congress may apply its own remedy to bear raiding.

President Hoover has advised stock exchange officials "that they should take adequate measures to protect investors from artificial depression of the price of securities for speculative profit." His statement reflects dissatisfaction with the conduct of the stock exchange during this period of hard times. That feeling is shared by the American people. It is up to directors of the exchanges to choose whether they will do the reforming themselves or leave it to Congress.

Republicans and Democrats in Congress have agreed on a new credit expansion bill, but they disagree as to who will get the credit.

The District may purchase high voltage current from Pennsylvania. This will probably mean another increase in current expenses.

It has been discovered that a Washington youth has been paying extortion on an installment basis. Thousands of car owners will understand!

The only difference between a lottery and trying to get fair treatment for the District from the House is that in a lottery you have a chance.

NUT NEWS

From the New York Sun.

Contributing its bit toward better things, a tree owned by Charles Vandersloot, of Chanceford township, York County, Pa., is producing black walnuts the size of an ordinary baseball; the National Nut News says that specimens have been sent to the United States Department of Agriculture. There it is likely to be revealed that Secretary Hyde is responsible for this improvement.

Near Albany in Georgia extra long fishing poles are necessary to harvest pecans. No bait is required; a properly directed blow with the pole opens the integument of the pecan and the developed nut falls to the ground, which is covered with white cloths to catch it. Researchers have been looking into the pecan-growing costs; with bureaucratic exactitude they report for Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana that "man labor constitutes from 7 to 22 per cent of the total cost, horse and tractor work from 9 to 24 per cent, materials from 11 to 34 per cent, other costs from 12 to 16 per cent and interest from 23 to 44 per cent." This tells the amateur all he should wish to know about the cost of growing pecans. The crop is heavy this year and the shellers are doing well. In planting, some growers have taught nature a trick; by laying the long tap root horizontally they get far better tree growth than is obtained when it is set in the old-fashioned vertical position.

Inside the outer shell of cashew nuts is a resinous matter which repels white ants. It can be used in bookbinding and to protect furniture from these pests. Cashew nuts provide oil that may be used in salad dressing; the oil of the olive has many rivals today.

Burmah, with a million and more acres in peanuts, and China, with a large crop of goobers, are pressing the Indian growers; Mozambique is contributing good quality nuts, but not in quantity to menace the Indian trade. Manchurian walnuts of the first shipment this year were criticized as to quality; they are now better, and Japan is ready to take credit for the improvement.

The National Nut News deposits before its readers this kernel of wisdom, suitable for consumption everywhere: "Business is not a matter of promise, but of performance. A business man or institution is rated by his productions. If he does not serve his constituency to its satisfaction that constituency will select some other servant," and it advocates this addition to the diet: "Two dozen blanched and shredded almonds; butter; one tablespoon chutney; one-quarter teaspoon salt; one tablespoon Worcestershire sauce; two tablespoons chopped pickles; few grains of cayenne. Fry almonds until well browned, using enough butter to prevent burning. Mix remaining ingredients, pour over nuts and serve as soon as thoroughly heated."

POST HASTE.

Japan should realize that after she dominates Shanghai's two million, 99½ per cent of the population of China will remain to be subjugated.

Democrats in Congress are getting peeved because administration measures of unquestioned merit have been coming along so fast and there was nothing to do but support them.

The party that has known nothing but opposition tactics begins to fear there is a catch for them in this cooperative business, even if it is for the best interests of the country.

If the new republic of Ankuo were really as "free and independent" as the Philippines it would be celebrating the millennium.

Under a general sales tax, 60,000,000 adults in the United States, unconsciously and invisibly, would readily contribute enough to wipe out the deficit. If 15,000,000 paid 2 cents extra a day on purchases, 15,000,000 paid 6 cents a day, 15,000,000 paid 12 cents a day and 15,000,000 paid 20 cents a day, it would amount to $6,000,000 a day, or, in a year, $2,190,000,000.

Times are so hard that the manufacturers can not keep up with orders for the new $25 electric razor.

Painleve forms the new government in Paris. At least France didn't have to go outside the little royal circle of perpetual cabinet personalities.

If you were in any doubt about the value of the reconstruction credit plan, remember that it is being attacked by Senators Blaine and Brookhart and Representative LaGuardia.

A large diagram must be prepared for expanationings on the Hill to show that if a new suboffice is created to take the place of two or three chiefs it is still an economy move.

Couldn't we begin the elimination process now by pairing Gen. Coxey with Dr. France and Bill Murray with Prexy Butler?

Failures decrease, hoarding ends, car loadings and employment of labor increase. Do you believe in signs?

With Henry Allen as President Dawes' assistant we are assured that the reconstruction cause will be presented with eloquence as well as emphasis.

A fortune awaits the inventive genius who provides an attachment that will enable the listener to talk back to the man—yes, or woman!—behind the microphone.

JUST FOLKS

GLADIOLAS.

Call them gladiolas! That's how mother knew them!
Gladiolas! Everybody in the country grew them
Thinking they were just the same to people in the city.

Came an aunt to visit us one summer time and she
Had a lot of wisdom and took every chance to share it;
Tried to teach us children how to say "gladioli!"
Mother wouldn't learn it 'cause she simply couldn't hear it.

Call them gladiolas! That is what they'll always be
To folks who really love 'em and whose natures never harden;
People who remember to pronounce "gladioli"
Maybe aren't familiar with the friendships of a garden.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Flapper Daughter.
By ROBERT QUILLEN

MY DEAR LOUISE—Something you said yesterday called my attention to the fact that you are in danger of becoming a Doubting Thomas.

As usual I can trace the fault to my own teachings, but that doesn't make it less a fault.

When you were a little shaver—say in the third or fourth grade—you developed symptoms of gullibility. Almost every day you brought home from school an improbable or impossible tale contributed by one of your classmates, and always you retold it with the conviction and authority of one chosen to deliver a new revelation from Sinai.

In short, my dear, you were a sucker for a tall tale, and I had a hard time convincing you that much of the world's gossip must be taken with a grain of salt.

Perhaps I did the job too well. At any rate you have now become a chronic doubter.

That is a virtue, but, like all virtues, it becomes a vice when carried too far.

Demand to be shown. Require the proof before you believe. Get the evidence before you form an opinion. All of that is good and wise.

But the practice of doubt exposes you to two dangers.

First, there is the danger that doubt will become so firmly fixed as a mental habit that you won't believe when the proof appears. He who is convinced against his will is of the same opinion still. By doubting too much and too often, you close your mind to truth and become a mental hermit in ignorance. No truth or idea that is new is permitted to enter your skull.

The other danger is the fruit of vanity. When people learn that the habit of questioning all statements attracts attention, they soon make a pretense of doubting for the sake of notoriety. Their doubts are no longer honest, but merely a means of feeding their vanity by holding the center of the stage.

Demand the proof, my dear, for that is the foundation of knowledge; but when the proof is offered, don't be silly or stubborn enough to reject it. Love, DAD.

Beautiful Delegates.
Charleston News and Courier.

Since the adoption of the nineteenth amendment, conferring the right of suffrage upon women, a small number of excellent women in South Carolina have been elected delegates to Democratic conventions, State and national, but if any have won lasting distinction, or have notably contributed to the leadership of the party counsels, it is not remembered. All of them have been creditable representatives, but is that enough?

With the object of having the South Carolinian women count more substantially in the Democratic party, the News and Courier proposes that eight or nine of them be elected to the national convention this year, and that they be chosen solely on account of youth and personal charm.

Efficiency at Washington.
Cincinnati Enquirer.

As governments go, that of the United States probably is reasonably efficient. But there are notable cases of clumsy and overlapping organization in the executive branch of the Federal Government that ought to have been readjusted long ago. The President's message to Congress Wednesday brings attention forcibly to this need. It comes at a time when economy and efficiency are more necessary than ever.

The President's plan is offered in general terms, leaving to Congress the detail of reorganization. But the principles he lays down are soundly conceived and should meet with general approval. He calls for grouping of executive and administrative functions under single-headed responsibility in terms of their major purpose, and for transfer of many independent boards and commissions to the regular executive departments, where they will be under Cabinet officers responsible to the people.

Sound Work by Senate.
Boston Transcript.

By its rejection of the La Follette-Costigan-Democratic proposal to appropriate $750,000,000 for direct relief by the Federal Government of the unemployed the United States Senate has sustained the sound principle of government laid down by President Hoover, that gifts from the Federal Treasury should not be made at the instance of politicians. No State had requested such action officially, and to have admitted the principle involved in the bill would have cost Congress the confidence of the business world, and have undermined at a stroke the slow but certain upbuilding of financial stability which a majority of the Senate believe to be indispensable, if the country is to return to normal conditions of prosperity and progress. Only fifteen Republicans, chiefly the radical group, who care nothing for the maintenance of Government credit, voted for the bill, and more Democrats voted against than for it, notwithstanding it had something of a Democratic sponsorship.

North Dakota's Sham Battle.
Minneapolis Journal.

When North Dakota's Republican voters go to the polls in the presidential primary election on March 15, they will find the names of only two men on the ballots as aspirants for the Presidency. The candidates are Joseph I. France, former senator from Maryland, and our old friend, "General" Jacob S. Coxey, of Coxey's Army fame.

Enough said, to illustrate the futility of the primary as a registration of the popular will. No wonder North Dakota papers are demanding repeal of the law, which entails an expense of more than $100,000 to the taxpayers of that State every four years.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Warnings Against Foreign Entanglements as Valid Now as When Washington Uttered Them.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of February 14 I found a letter signed by J. O. Knott, in which he criticized my views expressed in a letter two days earlier in The Post. In my letter I had defended your worthy stand against foreign entanglements of our Nation in the political affairs of Europe. It is evident to me that Mr. Knott was endeavoring to whip The Washington Post's editor over my shoulder. My critic seems to think that we are now hopelessly involved in European political affairs. I do not think so.

Mr. Knott calls attention to the early history of this Nation, in which Washington, Jefferson and other American statesmen warned us against political entanglements with Europe; but he apparently thinks that their political wisdom of that day has lost its virtue. On the contrary, I feel, and millions of other Americans feel, that the wisdom of our forefathers of the Revolutionary period is as worthy and valid today as it was at that time. I take the liberty to invite Mr. Knott's attention to a letter signed by Roy J. Mickey which appeared in The Post of the 16th instant. I fully coincide with Mr. Mickey's views as expressed in that letter.

It seems absurd for any good loyal American to hold that the teachings of our forefathers have become nil for these times. We are not in the political League of Nations or its wabbling "court." While we have become nationally involved in the loss of several billions by our meddling in the affairs of Europe, I feel sure that in the paraphrased expression of Commodore Decatur, we still have millions for defense, but not 1 cent for further juggling with transatlantic affairs.

JOHN R. WEATHERS.

Says Dr. Barton's Prediction as to Gov. Smith Is Based on His Belief That Smith Could Be Easily Beaten.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An Associated Press dispatch in the papers of February 17 quotes an announcement made by Dr. Arthur J. Barton, chairman of the executive committee of the Antisaloon League, to the effect that he fully expects the Democratic convention in June to nominate Alfred E. Smith for President. Nothing would please Dr. Barton better than to see his prediction become a reality, for he thinks that Gov. Smith would probably be much easier to defeat than would some of the other men now prominently mentioned as the Democratic standard bearer.

With Gov. Smith as the nominee there would be two issues as against one in the case of the other possible nominees now being mentioned, and no one knows better than Dr. Barton how effectively this second issue can be played up along with and under the guise of prohibition.

For my part, I haven't the slightest idea of Gov. Smith being nominated, much as I would like to vote for him.

VIRGINIA DEMOCRAT.

Police Should Not Advertise Their Plans for Catching the Phantom Sniper.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: The phantom sniper is getting a great deal of publicity and undoubtedly he is just the type who thrives on publicity. The police make all their actions known a day or two in advance. They will never succeed in catching their man if they insist upon this mode of procedure. The police should keep their plans well guarded. Less publicity from the Police Department and more action will be the undoing of this criminal, who has many Washingtonians thoroughly frightened.

It is evident that the police are dealing with a clever person, and they themselves must adopt more clever tactics in order to get their man. The policemen are a fine lot of courageous young men, and they certainly deserve praise rather than abuse. If all the members of the force would put their heads together, and keep their plans secret, they could get the phantom sniper.

Hopes Americans Are Out of the Line of Fire at Shanghai—Plenty of Warning Given.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has been talk of a "big push" at Shanghai for two weeks, and now the battle is due. Those Americans who have evacuated have acted wisely. There has been ample time for foreigners to get away from the danger zones. Yet, some of them are bullheaded enough to remain in the face of danger after having received repeated warnings to play safe. The foreigners who remain after having received these warnings are endangering the peace of their own countries.

It is the duty of the foreign powers to protect their interests and citizens in China, but there is a limit to everything. The leading nations have appealed to China and Japan to cease hostilities. If the big push is coming, let it come, but let China and Japan fight it out. It is their fight. Let us hope that there will be no Americans caught between the firing lines.

GIRL'S CASE LAXITY CHARGED TO POLICE

Glassford Orders Quiz on Complaint Investigation Was Bungled.

The actions of several First Precinct policemen in their investigation of a criminal assault on an 18-year-old girl of Uniontown, Pa., was ordered under investigation last night by Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford as a climax to a complaint made several weeks ago by the District attorney's office that the investigation had been bungled.

Gen. Glassford is particularly interested in discovering whether Patrolman Ralph D. Edwards failed to arrest Harry Clay Robertson, the convicted assailant, because the latter was a distant relative of the policeman.

The assault took place July 16 and Robertson was convicted last Wednesday in the District Supreme Court. Gen. Glassford is concentrating his investigation on the events of the night of July 16, when the assault victim and her brother are supposed to have pointed out Robertson to the policemen.

The policemen told the victim, her brother, and a friend of the brother to go to the First Precinct station after, they say, they had pointed out Robertson. When Patrolmen Edwards and Wallace M. Suthard reported at the precinct station a few minutes later, they did not have the man in custody and told the girl that she had not pointed out any one to them.

Several weeks ago the district attorney's office complained to police officials of the manner in which the case was handled. Valuable evidence was allowed to slip from the grasp of the officers, the complaint said, as a result of "gross inefficiency and neglect."

Testimony at the trial of Robertson and statements made to the district attorney's office will be the basis of the investigation of the policemen's conduct. Gen. Glassford last night assigned Lieut. Oscar J. Letterman to begin the investigation. Lieut. Letterman went over the case with the district attorney's office last night.

41st Banquet Held By Vaughn Class

Prof. Bliss Is Speaker, Paying Tribute to Washington.

A George Washington program featured the forty-first annual banquet of the Vaughn class of the Calvary Baptist Church last night, Freeman N. Stricklin was toastmaster.

A tribute to George Washington was delivered by Prof. Louis D. Bliss, the Rev. Allen A. Stockdale, pastor of the First Congregational Church, spoke on the subject of "Getting Up."

The program opened with an invocation from the Rev. Henry J. Smith, pastor of the Petworth Baptist Church, and a tribute to those who have died during the year. Former class presidents were introduced and a musical program was given by the Vaughn Class Orchestra and Miss Blanche Kerr, who sang "The Star-Spangled Banner." The salute to the flag was given by Linn C. Drake, and Earl B. Fuller led community singing.

Thieves 'Taken for Ride' Found Slain in Rumble

New York, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—William (Wolfy) Burke and Augie Marino, described by police as apartment thieves, were left dead today in the rumble seat of a roadster in which they had been "taken for a ride." The car was abandoned by the killers in West 114th street.

The bodies of Burke and Marino, who had been shot several times, were identified by a detective, who had arrested them in the past for flat burglaries and holdups.

A pedestrian who noticed blood running from the car to the running board near a rear mudguard notified the police and the bodies were found slumped under the cover of the rumble seat.

More Chairmen Named In Antihoarding Drive

Chicago, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—Eight additional State chairmen to aid in the campaign against the hoarding of money were announced tonight.

They are Maj. Gen. J. G. Harbord, for New York; Blanchard Randall, of Baltimore, for Maryland; Carol Faust, of Jackson, for Mississippi; Harold Baxter, of Phoenix, for Arizona; A. B. Barrett, of Fort Worth, for Texas; H. L. Streeter, of Boise, for Idaho, and Walter Ross, of Chicago, and Dr. Charles M. Thompson, of Champaign, for Illinois. With the acceptance of the eight named today 34 State chairmen have been appointed.

Chicago Plans Shaming Citizens to Pay Taxes

Chicago, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—Starving for taxes, Chicago conjured up plans today to shame or coerce its citizenry into paying delinquent tax bills, although based on an assessment held illegal and now being appealed to the State Supreme Court.

A roll of those who owe $5,000 or more was scanned by the city council judiciary committee today. They will be asked why they have not paid for fire, police and health protection received in 1928 and 1929, under threat of embarrassing publicity if they refuse to pay.

Divorce Decree Granted William McFee, Author

Bridgeport, Conn., Feb. 19 (A.P.).—William McFee, author of sea stories, today obtained an uncontested decree of divorce from Pauline Khondoff McFee, whom he met in Smyrna during the World War.

He charged desertion.

Robber Shows Hidden $7,229.

Clarksville, Ark., Feb. 19 (A.P.).—Directed to its hiding place by the man captured late yesterday and identified as one of the robbers of the Bank of Hartman, officers today found $7,229.35 of the loot under a stone and some leaves in the woods near Ozark. The prisoner, who gave his name as Dean Owens, alias Albert Hall, of Oklahoma, was brought to jail here.

Small U. S. Bonds Decided Upon to Disrupt Hoarding

March 7 Set as Date of Issue in Units of $50, $100 and $500; Will Be Obtainable Through Banks, Secretary Mills States.

(Associated Press.)

As part of the administration's effort to draw hoarded dollars back into circulation Secretary Mills last night announced a special issue of Treasury certificates would be offered to the public March 7 in denominations of $50, $100, and $500.

The interest rate will be announced later, he said, and will be at least 1½ per cent. It is planned that the certificates mature at the end of a year and be redeemable upon 60 days' notice. The total of the issue was not announced.

The move is the product of a suggestion by Col. Frank Knox, head of President Hoover's antihoarding organization, that Government securities in low denominations would draw many dollars from their present hiding places.

"The certificates will be available to purchasers through the banks," Secretary Mills said. "The banks, in turn, can, if they so desire, obtain the certificates through the so-called 'war loan deposit account' with the Federal Reserve banks. Under the well-established war loan deposit system, banks may subscribe for Government obligations and pay for them by means of a deposit to the credit of the Federal Reserve banks as fiscal agents of the United States. Inasmuch as payment by means of this method is in the form of credit, should funds for the purchase of certificates be withdrawn by depositors of the subscribing bank they will automatically be replaced by a Government deposit which will remain in the bank until called for by the Treasury.

"Should the certificates be purchased with currency held outside of banks, the banks receiving the subscriptions will gain the cash deposited by the subscriber, while they may pay for the certificates delivered to the subscriber by means of a deposit credit for the account of the Government.

"Those banks which are not at present designated to act as war loan depositaries may, upon complying with the Treasury regulations, obtain a depository designation.

"The offering of these special certificates will be entirely independent of the Treasury's March financing program."

Tulsa, Okla., Feb. 19 (A.P.).—W. R. Martineau, head of the antihoarding campaign in Oklahoma, told the Tulsa Chamber of Commerce today that the drive would culminate in two or three weeks with the sale of United States Government securities bearing 2½ per cent interest and convertible into cash on 60 days' notice.

"My information is that these certificates will not be offered as an investment for the general public," Martineau said, "but that the efforts of the Citizens Reconstruction Organization rather will be concentrated on exchanging them for money not now actively at work and out of circulation."

HOOVER AGAIN URGES ACTION TO END STOCKS SHORT SELLING

they demonstrate a capacity to put their own house in order by effective self-regulation Congressional action will be inevitable.

Like his previous appeal against bear raids the President's statement yesterday was issued shortly after a conference with officials of the stock exchange. Richard Whitney, president of the exchange, was a White House caller last week, with Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills.

In yesterday's trading, the first reaction to the proposed new stock exchange rule appeared to indicate a considerable abandonment of the stubborn bear pounding operations, which have tended during the last year to drive conservative traders and legitimate speculative interests entirely out of the market.

Exchange Held Determined.

Government officials were inclined to regard this reaction as evidence that the stock exchange membership now is determined to free the market of the professional bear raids, thus to call into play once more the constructive forces of free speculation.

But one day's reaction, nor one week's, does not firmly establish the house cleaning. There was a similar abandonment of the short pressure after the previous White House warning, yet in January the old system of sporadic bear raids reappeared. Because they strike without warning in whatever section of the market list they elect, these raids tend to drive the normal supporting speculative interest entirely out of trading. The permanent correction of this condition, through effective exchange rules, may be said to constitute the official conception of "adequate measures."

President Hoover is known to have followed the operations of the stock market with unwonted interest during the last three weeks. In some sections of the financial district he is understood to have gathered a list of the principal short traders on the big exchange.

During the past ten days, several of the President's callers have observed, on the work table behind his personal desk, a great cardboard chart of security price movements. To a degree, the price movements of specific stocks were correlated on this graph with the known bear raids on that particular section of the list on given days.

A subcommittee of the House judiciary committee has been conducting hearings for several weeks on various proposals to regulate short selling by Federal legislation. As yet, however, the committee has made no move to trace out the influence of such operations on particular stocks on particular days. Representative Clyde Kelly (Republican), of Pennsylvania, is author of the principal measure now before the committee.

Hoover's Statement

The text of the White House statement on short selling, issued yesterday, follows:

I have a question from the press as to conferences held with officials of the New York Stock Exchange. There have been discussions, as is reported, between myself and other officials of the administration with officials of the New York Stock Exchange on the question of bear raids.

Stock exchange officials have, during the past eight months, from time to time taken steps to restrain bear raiding with a degree of success, but during the latter part of January, despite these steps, there was a large increase in the short accounts, which unquestionably affected the prices of securities and brought discouragement to the country as a whole.

I and other administration officials again expressed our views to the managers of the exchange that they should take adequate measures to protect investors from artificial depression of the prices of securities for speculative profit. Individuals who use the facilities of the exchange for such purposes are not contributing to the recovery of the United States.

SENATE PASSES GLASS BILL TO EXPAND NATION'S CREDIT

by foreign countries, notably by France.

Senator Glass agreed to a change which would make the provision allowing individual banks to obtain the new rediscounting privileges available to all institutions with a capitalization of less than $2,000,000. The banking committee originally proposed a $500,000 limit.

The House bill places no restriction on the size of the bank which may take advantage of the emergency rediscounting privilege.

The Federal Reserve Board has the final say on what paper not now eligible may be cashed in by the Federal Reserve Bank under the bill.

Glass Loses on Time Limit

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, offered the amendment extending the terms of the legislation to two years, to March 3, 1934. He was opposed by Senator Glass, but the motion carried, 46 to 18.

One provision of the Senate bill is for permanent revision of the law. This allows a group of five banks to join in a promissory note for loans from the Federal Reserve on paper not eligible for rediscounting.

An attempt by Senator Blaine to add an amendment prohibiting the use of the credit in speculation was overwhelmingly rejected when Senator Glass explained he intended to bring up later a bill carrying this restriction.

Senator Walcott (Republican), Connecticut, who joined Glass in guiding the bill through the Senate, was named with Glass and Senator Townsend (Republican), Delaware, as conferees to work with representatives of the House in adjusting differences between the two chambers.

$700,000,000 Relief Bill Approved by House Group

(Associated Press.)

A $700,000,000 Federal relief bill was approved by the House labor committee yesterday by a 9-to-3 vote.

$300,000,000 for direct loans to States by the Secretary of the Treasury upon the application of governors, who would be required to furnish State bonds in that amount.

$200,000,000 for direct grants to States that have borrowed to their limit or whose Constitution prohibits applications for loans.

$200,000,000 to be spent on the public building program where allocations already have been made, but where the budget bureau has not submitted estimates for appropriations.

Under both the loan provision and the direct grant provision the States would be required to repay the money within ten years. Failing that, the Treasury would make deductions from that State's participation in the annual Federal highway fund.

An unemployment relief bill which would make Saturdays a legal holiday was introduced by Representative Britten.

Poland's Extensive Plans Will Honor Washington

Warsaw, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—President Kotnowski, of the Polish-American Chamber of Commerce, announced today that the main avenue of Paderewski Park in Warsaw will receive the name of Washington avenue in honor of the Bicentennial of the birthday of the American President.

Other details of preliminary work for the extensive Bicentennial celebration in Poland were also revealed. A commemorative stamp will be issued in April but one of the issue will be presented to President Hoover on February 22. A Washington tree will be planted in Paderewski Park and noted Polish speakers will be present for the city hall celebration on February 22.

Great Diamond Mine Closes.

Cape Town, Union of South Africa, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—Official announcement was made today that the Premier Diamond Mine, where the great Cullinan diamond was found in 1905, will be closed on March 31. This announcement followed yesterday's news that the valuable De Beers mine would be closed on the same date because of the "very serious condition" in the diamond trade.

N. E. A. CONVENTION OPENS HERE TODAY

15,000 Are Expected at Sessions of Department of Superintendence.

The sixty-second annual convention of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association will open today, bringing 15,000 school superintendents and other school officials to the Capital.

The school administrators will study every phase of school management, from the acute problems of current school finance to the improvement of character building and music and art instruction in the schools. Today will be devoted to registration and a review of school exhibits, beginning at 4 o'clock this afternoon, at the Washington Auditorium.

Ceremonies tomorrow afternoon will center around the opening of the George Washington Bicentennial. There will be services at the Washington Monument, the Lincoln Memorial, at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, at Old Christ Church in Alexandria, and at Constitution Hall, where a vesper service and the first general session will be held.

Exercises at Monument.

The ceremony at the Washington Monument will be featured by singing from the Radiotone Male Quartet of Washington and the placing of a wreath by Edwin C. Broome, superintendent of schools at Philadelphia, and president of the Department of Superintendence.

The quartet will also sing at the service at the Lincoln Memorial, scheduled for 2:30 o'clock, and a wreath will be deposited there by George C. Bush, superintendent of schools at South Pasadena, Calif., and second vice president of the Department of Superintendence.

The delegates will then continue their patriotic pilgrimage to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier where the quartet will sing and a wreath, honoring the war dead, will be placed by Norman R. Crozier, superintendent of schools at Dallas, Tex., and first vice president of the Department of Superintendence.

The service at Old Christ Church in Alexandria, set for 2:30 o'clock, will consist of a processional by the choir of the church, an invocation and talk by the Rev. William J. Morton, rector of the church, music from the chorus of children from the public schools of Alexandria, an address by Herbert S. Weet, superintendent of schools at Rochester, N. Constitution Hall Vespers.

President Broome will preside at the vesper service and first general session at Constitution Hall at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and Rufus B. von Kleinamid, president of the University of Southern California, will make the principal address. The Rev. Joseph Richard Sizoo, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will make the invocation, and music will be by the Hampton Institute choir under the direction of Ernest H. Hays.

The first business session will be held Monday morning, beginning at 8:45 o'clock. A feature of this session will be the presentation of the yearbook on character education. Rabbi Abram Simon, president of the District of Columbia Board of Education, will pronounce the invocation and President Broome will preside. Those who will present reports on character education include A. L. Threlkeld, superintendent of schools, Denver, Colo. and chairman of the 1932 Yearbook Commission on Character Education; Frank N. Freeman, of the school of education at the University of Chicago; Mrs. John K. Norton, associate director of research at the National Education Association, and Charles B. Glenn, superintendent of schools, Birmingham, Ala., and Charles H. Judd, dean of the school of education at the University of Chicago.

Tribute to Washington.

At the hour of George Washington's birth the audience will rise and give the pledge of allegiance to the flag and sing "America." The singing will be led by E. N. C. Barnes, director of music for the Washington public schools, and musical accompaniment will be given by the Teachers Orchestra of the local public schools. At noon President Hoover's Bicentennial address to a joint session of Congress will be broadcast to the school delegates.

President Hoover will participate in a pilgrimage of the superintendents to Mount Vernon at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon when he places a wreath on the tomb of George Washington and extends greeting to the delegates. President Broome will also place a wreath on the tomb, and Florence Hale, president of the National Education Association, will place a wreath on the tomb of Martha Washington. Monday night the school superintendents will be the guests of George Washington University at its Bicentennial convocation. Two business sessions will also be held that night, one at Memorial Continental Hall and the other at the United States Chamber of Commerce.

The high point of the convention will probably be reached at Tuesday's session, when the present crisis in public education will be discussed by school heads from various parts of the country. Election of officers of the department will be held Wednesday.

Brown Sued for $50,000 In Alleged Postal Deal

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 19 (A.P.).—John B. Dove, former member of the Republican State central committee, today filed suit against Postmaster General Walter F. Brown and Dirrelle Chaney, administrative assistant, for $50,000 damages in connection with the alleged payment of $500 for a postmastership that was not granted.

Dove, who seeks $500 actual damages and $49,500 punitive damages, recently completed a term in the Federal Penitentiary here for barter of Federal offices. The suit, filed in the city court of Atlanta, claims the defendants represented to him that the Postmaster General would obtain the appointment of E. B. Benson as postmaster at College Park, Ga., an Atlanta auburb, upon payment of $500 to the order of Mr. Brown. Dove avers that the money was paid but return of it was refused when the appointment was denied.

Man Is Bomb Suicide As Tax Collector Calls

Brno, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—Joseph Stava, a cabinet maker, blew himself and his shop to bits with a bomb when a tax collector arrived to foreclose upon the shop.

He chased the collector out with one hand grenade and then set off another in the shop.

PITTS WILL ACCEPT 15-YEAR SENTENCES

Decides to Serve Contempt and Embezzling Terms; Withdraws Appeals.

G. Bryan Pitts, former multimillionaire head of the F. H. Smith Co., yesterday asked the District Court of Appeals and the District Supreme Court to withdraw from consideration appeals which he had pending to contest the legality of sentences aggregating fifteen years and a day.

Pitts' move came as a complete surprise to the Government prosecutors, Nugent Dodds and Neil Burkinshaw. The significance of the move is that Pitts will now start serving a fourteen-year sentence he got in December, 1930, upon being convicted of embezzling money from the company he headed, and a sentence of one year and a day for criminal contempt of court.

None of the time Pitts has served since he received sentence will be considered. Time served while an appeal is pending is literally "lost time" since the courts have held that such servitude shall not be considered as a part of any sentence.

Just what action will be taken in regard to four felony indictments now pending against the one-time mortgage firm leader is not known. He probably will be allowed to plead to the indictments, with the privilege of having them run concurrently with his present sentence.

Pitts, Elbert Anadale and John H. Edwards were sentenced for embezzling money from the Smith company. In a court proceedings three months ago he was found guilty by Justice F. D. Letts of criminal contempt of court in that he introduced into his defense a batch of false authorizations. The embezzlements charged to Pitts amounted to $5,000,000.

Pitts has met many reverses since he retired as head of the Smith company. Hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of jewelry, bonds and real estate have been taken away from him by the Government for income tax delinquencies, and he has yet to face a multiplicity of suits which seek to recover from him money lost through investments with the Smith company.

Fire Razes Wesley Hall At Vanderbilt University

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 19 (A.P.).—A spectacular fire late today destroyed Wesley Hall, which housed Vanderbilt University's School of Religion, student dormitories and faculty apartments.

The building's four upper stories and a basement were swept by the flames. The library of the School of Religion, containing 15,000 volumes, many of them rare, was destroyed. An effort by students to save some of the more valuable books by throwing them out of the windows proved futile when a section of the blazing roof fell on the books piled on the ground.

Antitrust Act Quiz Is Asked of House

(Associated Press.)

Authority for the judiciary committee to investigate the antitrust law was asked of the House yesterday by Chairman Sumners in a resolution referred to the rules committee. The Texas Democrat said the information was needed so that the committee could make recommendations for changes in the law to meet new economic conditions.

Noting that vast changes have occurred in businesses during the last 20 years, Sumners recalled that no important change has been made in the antitrust laws since the Clayton act.

"The Nation has been drifting along without considering the antitrust laws, when there are demands for radical changes to meet new economic conditions," Sumners said. "People who have been violating the law, or who are apprehensive they have violated the law, want a change in the law and policy to justify their practices.

"Those who want to form trade agreements are greatly interested in revamping the laws, and we have many complaints from people who believe consolidation and concentration have gone beyond the point of safety for the public."

In this way they will aid other homemakers in solving a practical problem, how to simplify the menus in keeping with the season and also with the necessity for economy and yet not reduce the food value of the meals served to their households.

Today's prize winners of books and honorable mentions for best recipes are printed below:

(Awarded Book Prize.)

2 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 cup peanut butter—Schindler's "fresh roasted"
If butter pastry, use about 3 cups flour in making

Mix eggs and sugar, then add peanut butter and butter. Cook over hot water till thick. Cool. Place it on 3-inch square of pastry, fold covers of pastry toward center over mound of filling, and bake in hot oven (425 degrees) till nicely browned. This makes 2½ dozen small squares.

These are a most unusual, but equally tasty, wafer; both the children and the adult members of the family will be greatly pleased with them.

(Honorable Mention.)

Cream of Peanut Butter Soup.

1 tablespoon butter
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon flour
2 cups milk
2 to 4 tablespoons Schindler's peanut butter
2 to 4 tablespoons cold milk mixed with peanut butter

Melt butter, remove from fire and stir in flour and salt; slowly mix in one-half the milk and when smooth and well blended return to fire, boil and stir for three minutes; add remaining milk and peanut butter mixed with the cold milk. Beat with an egg beater until well blended. Add paprika and keep hot over water. Serve plain or with whipped cream. Cream of peanut butter soup is one of the simplest possibilities outside of canned soups.

Peanut Butter Chops.

6 half-inch slices rye bread
¾ cup milk
¼ teaspoon salt
Cracker crumbs
1 cup Schindler's peanut butter
2 eggs
1-8 teaspoon paprika

Directions: Cut crust from bread, and divide in length-wise strips. Spread peanut butter on both sides of each strip. Add milk and seasonings to the eggs, beat thoroughly, dip strips of bread into the mixture, then in sifted cracker crumbs. Put into a greased bread pan and bake in a hot oven (400 to 500 degrees) until golden brown. These chops make an excellent meat substitute.

Peanut Butter Custard.

1 cup evaporated milk
3 eggs
¼ cup sugar
1¼ cups water
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons Schindler's peanut butter

Directions: Beat eggs slightly, add sugar and salt. Pour the scalded milk and water in which the peanut butter has been dissolved slowly on the egg mixture. Strain and pour into buttered custard cups. Place cups in a pan of hot water and bake in a slow oven (275 degrees) for about 30 minutes, or until knife inserted in center of one of the custards comes out clean.

MRS. E. W. HEBERT.
Twenty-fifth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

OLD VIRGINIA CARAMEL PIE.
(Honorable Mention.)

¼ pound butter (Land o' Lakes).
6 eggs.
1 glass currant jelly.
1 pint milk.
2 tablespoons flour.
1 teaspoon vanilla.

Cream the butter and the sugar and flour together until well mixed, then add the well-beaten yolks, the jelly and milk, also the vanilla. Last of all fold in the well-beaten egg whites and bake in uncooked pie shells in a moderate oven until a nice brown all over and the filling is firm. This recipe makes two pies. Currant preserves may be used instead of the jelly.

ALICE KILGOUR.

The Homemaker

Gives a Recipe for Peanut Scrapple.

PEANUT SCRAPPLE, Mrs. Tutweiler, calls for cheese as well as peanuts, also for cornmeal and hominy grits, which will explain to you that it is not too rich a food for human consumption. We are delighted to give you the recipe and hope you enjoy the dish as much as you anticipate. We also agree with you that it does sound good, to which we add the fact that it also tastes good.

Nancy Carey.

Peanut Scrapple.
(For Mrs. Tutweiler.)

4 cups boiling water
1 cup hot milk
1 cup yellow cornmeal
¾ cup hominy grits
1½ cups chopped peanuts
½ to 1 cup grated cheese
1¼ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon paprika

Combine the water and milk and bring to boiling point. Add the cornmeal, hominy grits and seasonings. Stir constantly until thick, place in double boiler and cook for one hour. Add peanuts and cheese ten minutes before removing from fire. Place in a bread pan and allow to cool. When ready to use, cut in slices; roll in egg and crumbs and fry in deep, hot fat until brown—from 3 to 5 minutes, or place in greased baking dish, sprinkle with crumbs mixed with grated cheese and bake in a moderate oven until brown.

Sauerkraut Cocktail.

Drain juice from sauerkraut (juice may be bought already bottled) and allow one-half cup to each serving. Add one teaspoon of the following sauce to each serving and chill.

Sauce.

¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon catsup
1½ teaspoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon Worchestshire sauce
1½ tablespoon chili sauce
½ teaspoon horseradish
Mix ingredients together thoroughly.

Roast of Fresh Pork.

Have bone removed from a shoulder of fresh pork, parboil one hour and stuff the pocket where bone was removed with a mixture of one cup chopped apples, two cups breadcrumbs, a fourth cup of milk, a quarter teaspoon of ground cloves, pepper and salt to taste. Fasten opening with skewers, place on rack in roasting pan, dredge with flour and bake three or four hours until tender, basting every fifteen minutes. Serve with gravy made from meat juices in pan, first pouring off the excess fat.

Sweet Potatoes With Pineapple.

Boil and mash eight sweet potatoes. Add a little butter and two tablespoons of cream. Put a layer of the mashed sweet potatoes in a baking dish, then a layer of sliced pineapple cut in small pieces, alternating until the dish is full. Arrange fresh marshmallows over the top of the potatoes and place in a moderate oven to heat thoroughly and brown. Allow plenty of room at the sides of the dish above the marshmallows for they puff considerably.

Broccoli Hollandaise.

Select the small heads of broccoli and serve whole or in halves or select large heads and use the flowers and tender stalks. Remove the large outside leaves and trim the stalks. Cook in boiling salted water until tender.

Hollandaise Sauce.

½ cup butter (wash thoroughly in ice water and work until dry.)
2 egg yolks.
1-3 cup cream or boiling water
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Salt and cayenne to taste

Divide the butter into three parts. Place one-third in a small saucepan and melt over steam. Cool the saucepan and then add the eggs and liquid. Stir rapidly over steam until the mixture begins to thicken. Remove, add the second piece of butter and stir until blended. Then add the third piece, and last, the lemon juice and seasoning. Beat hard with a rotary beater. If a double boiler is used for the cooking, do not let the water touch the upper pan.

Answers to Readers.

Dear Miss Carey: Are prunes fattening? And soda crackers? I eat them instead of bread and am very anxious to avoid gaining weight. Have you a list of calories you could send me?

DOROTHY.

All dried foods, Dorothy, prunes and raisins, dates and figs, are comparatively high in fuel value and should, therefore, always be used very moderately in reducing diets. The degree of moderation will depend on the extent to which the individual is overweight. If taken in place of other sweets, especially at the end of a meal, they are very, very healthful and, if carefully counted in the daily caloric allowance, will not even be beyond the reach of those considerably overweight. Sweets taken in this form are much less concentrated and much less apt to tempt us to eat more than is wise.

As for the soda cracker, it takes four to equal 100 calories, the value of an average slice of bread. Depending, then, on the number you eat, the amount of butter used, &c., you will be able to judge whether or not they will be more fattening for you than bread. A great deal depends on the individual, you know. What makes one man fat has no such effect upon another, perhaps. And all because the first man does not need it. His energy supply is greater than the demand, while the other, because of his build, disposition or inherited tendencies, burns up such energy quickly, leaving none to be stored away as fat. So each one must be a law unto himself, you see. While some foods do favor the formation of fat more than others, cream and butter, for example, still they may be termed "fattening" only insofar as each individual is concerned.

EASTER BUNNY CAKE WINS RECIPE PRIZE

Mrs. Don Donnelly Is Given Post's $5 Award for Confection.

With the time for coloring eggs and getting up other interesting culinary surprises for the children fast approaching, this interesting pastry should make a delightful Easter confection.

EASTER BUNNY CAKE.
(Awarded $5 Prize.)

4 eggs
1½ cups granuated sugar
2 cups pastry flour (Schneider's)
2 teaspoons Royal baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup boiling water
1 teaspoon lemon extract

Beat eggs until very light. Beat in sugar little at a time, then add flour which has been sifted with salted baking powder. Add boiling water, small amount at a time, and the flavoring. Put into ungreased large-sized angel cake tin and bake in a slow oven for about one hour, starting at 250 degrees F. and increasing to 350 degree F. When cake is cold, frost as follows:

1½ cups confectioner's sugar
2 tablespoons milk
½ teaspoon almond extract
2 teaspoons melted butter
Green vegetable coloring

Moisten sugar with milk until proper consistency to spread. Add flavoring and spread on top and sides of cake, saving a small amount of icing. Add melted butter to this and a little green coloring to make a delicate shade. Decorate rim of cake with this green icing, allowing it to drip over edge to resemble grass. While frosting is soft, make bunnies with large fresh marshmallows (Sanitary) which are pinched with the thumb and finger at one end for nose and at the other for tail. Dip toothpick in melted chocolate and make dots for eyes and nose. Large ears are cut from pink writing paper. Arrange a row of these bunnies around edge of cake. This surprise never fails to delight the "kiddies."

MRS. DON DONNELLY.

¼ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon vinegar
2-3 cup Chutney
1 tablespoon lemon juice
4 tablespoons corn salad oil

Market Meanderings

By MILDRED REED BUNDY

Potomac Fish Shops Prove Interesting on Marketing Tour, Providing Many Varieties of Sea Foods; Prices Lower Than Usual.

Water-front fish shops, their front doors opening on a city street, their back doors on the Potomac, invited exploration by the Meanderer this week. The nearness of Lent gave added point to such an expedition, although Washington's sea food shops are worth visiting at any season of the year. Surprisingly, too, The Meanderer found that the local sea-food trade is so active through the year that the Lenten season makes a scarcely noticeable increase.

"Sea food is so much used by Washingtonians that we have only a very slightly larger trade during the weeks of Lent," one well-known fish marketer told the Meanderer. "That may mean either that Washington observes Lent less rigorously or eats more fish than do other cities. This marketer's shop is one of the largest and most attractive on the water front, with its concrete floor, cleanly washed, and its aquatic offerings so enticing on ice-covered tables. Gold, blue, coral, silver, green and shiny black fish, fresh or frozen, from very large to very small, caught in the seven seas, to say nothing of rivers and bays and lakes, are ready there for the selection of the most critical.

In cosmopolitan Washington there are doubtless many housewives from inland territory who, until coming here, had not been accustomed to the availability of such abundance of sea food. Herself an inlander, the Meanderer finds need of education in the niceties and complexities of sea food. Fortunately, she found a helpful, courteous marketer who is ready with sea food lessons for any—shall we say—floundering inlander housewife, and equally ready with expert advice for the housewife who already knows her fish. This helpful marketer speaks as one having very definite knowledge of his subject. The kinds of fish, their cost, their origin, the methods of preparing them and even the food values in many of them, are information that he is glad to give all who ask. He has been in the United States eighteen years. As a boy, in his home in Thessaly, Greece, he learned much about fish while living in a town on the coast of the Aegean Sea, where fishing is the principal industry. In Washington, as a university student, he earned his living by working in the waterfront fish shops.

From this student of sea food, the Meanderer learned that scallops from Cape May are just now a very advantageous buy, costing 40 cents a pound. Last year's price at this season was 75 cents. The lime content of these mollusks makes them particularly desirable in the diet. It was from the name of these bivalves, which comes from the old French word for "shell" that the culinary term "scalloped or escalloped" was derived. It denoted originally foods such as oysters, cooked with milk, butter and crumbs in the big shells of the scallops.

Fresh shrimps from the extensive shrimp fisheries in Biloxi, Miss., are another important offering on the local market, and sell this week for only 25 cents a pound. Shrimps, together with many other kinds of sea food, are cheaper now than this particular marketer interviewed by the Meanderer has ever known them to be. Another instance of lower costs in sea food is crab meat at 65 cents a pound for the highest quality. Other interesting values are Spanish mackerel at 20 cents a pound, salmon trout at 25 cents, sea bass at 15 cents, medium size bluefish at 20 cents, large flounders at 20 cents, buck shad at 20 cents, large smelts at 25 cents and cooked shrimp at 50 cents.

Adjoining these river-front sea shops is one of Washington's largest terminal food markets, where food in huge bulk and great variety is fresh, tempting, and low-priced. Open sheds in which many foods are sold at retail, offer excellent territory for the exploring, economical housewife. A half bushel of the best potatoes the Meanderer has had this winter cost but 40 cents there in the open-shed section of the Terminal Market. Cabbage, spinach, cooking cress, collards, kale, and onions are other vegetables priced correspondingly low.

Eggs at 20 cents a dozen are still another value to be found in this big market. The colder weather has failed to bring egg prices up.

Sunshine has given to this food a balanced richness in vitamin and nourishment that spells "health" to growing youngsters.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THE Syracuse Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Vladimir Shavitch, will be heard in a full-length concert to be broadcast over WMAL from 2:30 to 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Founded in 1920, the Syracuse Symphony has grown rapidly since 1924 under the direction of Vladimir Shavitch until it now ranks among the most important orchestras in the country. Among the distinguished artists who have appeared with it as soloists are Hofmann, Gabrilowitsch, Respighi, Prokofieff and Szigeti.

Following are the selections to be played:

"Military" Symphony (Haydn).

Overture, Fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet" (Tschaikovsky).

"Song of Faith," for chorus and orchestra, commemorating George Washington Bicentennial, first broadcast performance (Carpenter).

"The Pines of Rome" (Respighi).

BECAUSE there are so many varying and conflicting views as to just what constitutes an educational broadcast, the report of the Federal Radio Commission on the Couzens' resolution, amended by Senator Dill, will present all these attitudes, leaving it up to the Senate to decide where education leaves off and entertainment begins or whether they overlap.

One group adheres to the doctrine that none but programs of actual instruction, as in a classroom with texts and teachers, are educational. They support the theory that educational broadcasts should emanate from educational institutions, and that broadcasts of actual classroom work should be made.

Several such experiments are now being carried on. At one Southern university there is an arrangement whereby the professor sits at his desk in a glass cage, with a microphone before him. He is plainly visible to students who sit before him and who hear his lectures by means of small auxiliary attachments transmitting his voice to the classroom. The listener to the broadcast hears the professor's lecture as he talks from his notes or text.

ANOTHER group believes that although this type of broadcast is undoubtedly educational, it is not the kind the public will listen to. This group points out that broadcasts of speeches of public officials, and of national events, are just as educational, yet have added interest. They explain that an average listener would not learn much from a classroom program, because his interest would not be sufficiently stimulated to assure his close attention. The same listener, they say, would learn from the speech of a prominent man or from such a broadcast as an inauguration because this type of program would stimulate interest.

Stations in all parts of the country are presenting just such programs every day, they declare, and the listening public is receiving an education that it could not get from a classroom broadcast.

A third group points out that broadcasts of fine musical programs, recitations of classic literature, cooking recipes, health talks, &c., educate just as well as the second plan, better than the first, and provide more entertainment than either.

The most liberal group supports the theory that broadcasts of plays, comedy skits, sports events, &c., are educational. They say the homely humor of several well-known comedy teams is educational to thousands of persons to whom the classroom broadcasts and the speeches of public officials would mean nothing. They explain that no person can be educated by a program he won't listen to, and claim that the average listener is not interested enough in being educated to listen to any but popular broadcasts.

THE third and fourth acts of Giuseppe Verdi's opera, "La Traviata" will be broadcast by the Metropolitan Opera Company (WRC, at 3:30) this afternoon. Verdi's work is based on the novel "La Dame aux Camelias," by Alexander Dumas. The role of Violetta will be sung by Lucrezia Bori, soprano; Alfred, by Frederick Jagel, tenor, and Alfred's father by Giuseppe de Luca, barytone. Tullio Serafin will conduct.

In honor of the tenth birthday of station WGY, the voice of the House of Magic, at Schenectady, N. Y., a gala birthday anniversary celebration will be broadcast (WRC, at 11:30) tonight. The occasion will serve as a reunion of many of the early announcers and entertainers

The program will include a scene from Tolstoi's "Redemption," presented by Rosaline Green, a pioneer in radio drama and Edward H. Smith, first director of WGY players. Charles Gilbert Spross, pianist-composer, will present a brief recital. Dave Buttolph will direct the concert orchestra and the original Georgia minstrel boys, with Edward Smith as interlocuter and Kalin Hager and A. O. Coggeshall as end men, will conclude the radio party.

The music of Manolo Castro's La Corona Orchestra, playing at the Nacionale Hotel in Havana, Cuba, will be broadcast during the Lucky Strike dance hour tonight (WRC, at 10). The program will be transmitted to New York by cable, and redistributed from that point.

FROM the Detroit News:

"The dreadful sounds we sometimes hear over the radio are caused by sunspots, an astronomer believes. I heard one sunspot last night that was a soprano, and one that was a tenor."

Ann Interprets the Mode

New York, Feb. 19.

IF anyone needs to know how important the correctly cut costume slip is to the chic and elegance of the gown, one does just have to realize that no Parisian couturier ever makes a gown for a client without an accompanying slip. And a costume slip nowadays requires considerable thought. Due to the variety of silhouette that is found in one wardrobe, due to the smooth, bunchless and wrinkleless area from the normal waistline to below the hips which fashion demands of us—due, perhaps, also to the many and lovely new woolens which are even more transparent than silks, increasing importance has been given the costume slip.

And it is importance which it deserves, because a costume slip can, oh, so easily mar one's outfit!

The latest wrinkle, or to be accurate, the latest lack of wrinkles in Miladi's costume slip is to cut it on a bias, so that the material itself will, while giving her sufficient room for sitting and walking, stretch itself back into shape when she is standing. We hear a lot about cutting this and that on the bias nowadays, don't we? And it's all because, by handling material this way, one can have what appears to be tightness without constriction.

• • • •

A note from the house of Worth says: "The idea of the ensemble, that is, coat and dress to match, is finished; and the formal evening gown does not occupy the important place it had in preceding collections."

• • • •

Don't forget that your coiffure must be in accordance with your hat, and your hat in accordance with your gown. Means wot? That a sports hat is in order for morning wear, and sports wear, of course, and that you must wear some sort of a hairdress or hair cut that suits this type of hat—and frock. And that the same little lady will wear an afternoon dress, with a suitable afternoon hat—and a more dressy coiffure.

Au revoir.

CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

By ELY CULBERTSON

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

230

FINDING THE RIGHT BID.

Freak distributions make of no effect Aces and Kings which under other conditions would be good for tricks either on the attack or defense.

Mr. Robert J. Gill, of Baltimore, sent me the hand below with the bidding as it occurred and asked me to comment on it.

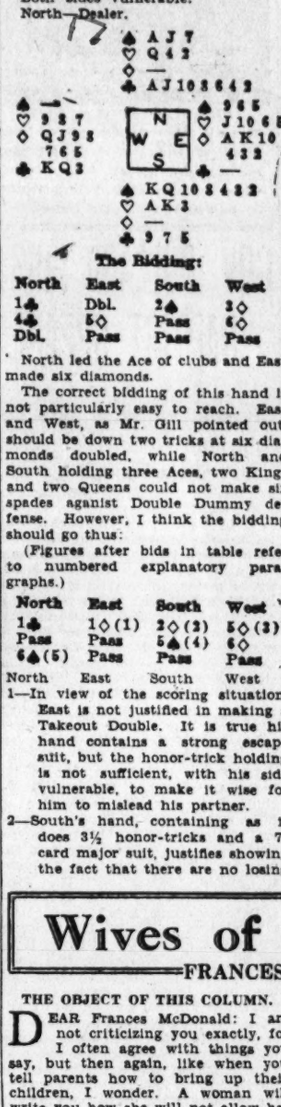
North—Dealer.



The Bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♣	Dbl.	2♠	3◇
4♣	5◇	Pass	6◇
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

North led the Ace of clubs and East made six diamonds.

The correct bidding of this hand is not particularly easy to reach. East and West, as Mr. Gill pointed out, should be down two tricks at six diamonds doubled, while North and South holding three Aces, two Kings and two Queens could not make six spades aganist Double Dummy defense. However, I think the bidding should go thus:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1♣	1◇(1)	2◇(2)	5◇(3)
Pass	Pass	5♣(4)	6◇
6♠(5)	Pass	Pass	Pass

North East South West

1—In view of the scoring situation, East is not justified in making a Takeout Double. It is true his hand contains a strong escape suit, but the honor-trick holding is not sufficient, with his side vulnerable, to make it wise for him to mislead his partner.

2—South's hand, containing as it does 3½ honor-tricks and a 7-card major suit, justifies showing the fact that there are no losing diamonds. If the hands fit, a Slam is easily possible.

3—West's bid of five diamonds is an overbid, but apparently not an expensive one if he can interrupt the line of communications between his opponents.

4—South's bid of five spades is perfectly sound.

5—While North fears duplication of values, as he can not vision South as also void of diamonds, the Slam try rather than seeking to set the opponents, is the better course.

In the play, as Mr. Gill pointed out, six diamonds were made due to North's selection of the Opening lead. North had two better choices of a lead—either the suit bid by his partner or a small heart. The heart lead would have been in the nature of a waiting lead, but he can infer heart strength in his partner's hand from the bidding. To lead the Ace of clubs makes possible the very thing that actually occurred, namely that either East or West was void of the suit, and the other held honors upon which losers in another suit could be discarded. East and West could not afford to bid seven diamonds, as with losing hearts in both hands the penalty might be excessive, although the weak defensive power of their combined hands might suggest such a sacrifice.

TODAY'S POINTER.

In using the Approach-Forcing System, the important factors in Slam bidding are accurate knowledge of honor-tricks held and distribution which may make of no effect opposing honor strength.

Indoor—Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

WILL you please tell me how to care for a snowball bush?

The leaves continue to drop off during the entire season and because of this the bush never seems to get any larger. MRS. THOMAS F. L.

The snowball bush requires a sunny situation and a rich, well-drained soil. Better incorporate some bonemeal with the soil in which it is growing and spray the bush with lime-sulphur, as the dropping off of the leaves indicates the presence of a blight.

I have plants that I call elephant's ears. The leaves on some varieties are pink-striped or mottled with white, others have foliage that is just the opposite. I put them on my porch in summer and apparently they died. I kept on watering them and, to my surprise, they began to sprout. I now have them in a fernery. What kind of soil do these plants require? How often should they be watered? SADIE F. W.

Your plants are evidently caladiums, which are listed as conservatory plants. Being of a tropical nature, they demand a warm, moist temperature. Caladiums are usually started in moss with bottom heat; they are rather hard to start in the house, where it is difficult to control both heat and moisture. I am sure you have your plants in too sunny a place. They require a rich soil and water every day.

Please let me know the best time to repot ferns. RENA H. L.

I should hesitate to repot any fern unless it showed signs of disease or I were sure it was potbound. Ferns do not require an abundance of root room and they never take kindly to change. Repotting is likely to check their growth. If you feel that your plants do need it, you may transfer them into fresh soil at any time. There is no special season for repotting them.

Please tell me whether a tablespoonful of castor oil poured over the soil in a pot where a pandanus is growing will prove beneficial to the plant. ROSEANNA G. E.

No. This is a mistaken idea held by a great many people. Castor oil has absolutely no effect on a pandanus. When poured over the soil it has a tendency to draw insects such as ants and white flies.

Please tell me if rhododendrons do better in acid soil. I have been told that they do. MRS. ROBERT D. S.

Yes. If you feel your soil has too much lime in it, better add some aluminum sulphate and humus to your top soil. The quantity to be used depends somewhat on the lack of acidity, but twelve to eighteen ounces of sulphate per square yard of surface is sufficient in most cases. Aluminum sulphate can be purchased from your nurseryman or seedsman.

Can I expect flowers from Canterbury bells which I planted last season? The plants did well last season, so I am expecting a bumper crop of blooms this summer. NANCY S. D.

Yes, if you did not sow the seeds too late you should have a profusion of blooms this year. The seed should have been sown between May and August in good soil and the plants from the time they attained a height of four inches should have been watered daily.

46,000 Pupils Held In Eyesight Danger

Only 4,000 of Defective Vision Now Allowed Special Help.

The eyesight of at least 46,000 American school children who suffer from seriously defective vision, is unnecessarily jeopardized, it was charged by Lewis H. Carris, of New York City, managing director of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, in an address here yesterday before the International Council for the Education of Exceptional Children.

Mr. Carris quoted statistics gathered by the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness at the request of the recent White House Conference on Child Health and Protection, which disclosed that, although 50,000 school children are known to be suffering from defective vision, special educational facilities are provideed for only 4,000 of them.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

THE OBJECT OF THIS COLUMN.

DEAR Frances McDonald: I am not criticizing you exactly, for I often agree with things you say, but then again, like when you tell parents how to bring up their children, I wonder. A woman will write you how she will not allow her daughters out, or so on, and you tell her she is in the wrong and the girls are in the right. I think she is right to get sore. She wrote to you hoping you would back her up. Instead you side with the girls who are perhaps already making her a lot of trouble. I should think if you can not help a woman or see it her way you should say nothing—instead of making girls harder than ever to manage. I supposed the object of the column was to help the reader.

ANOTHER MOTHER.

Right you are. The object of the column is to help the reader. Not necessarily to please the reader, however, any more than a court or any other public service established for the betterment of the community. If a mother is following any course that we know from experience is going to lead to family disruption, perhaps result in her being left without support by her daughters as soon as they come of age, we naturally point out to her just why her way is the wrong way, just as we would commend her if her way were the wise way.

You are not the only person who wonders about these columns and their purpose and psychology. You know a few years ago such columns really meant nothing and were entirely purposeless. Whoever conducted the column just made the reader feel smug and satisfied and let it go at that. The result was that no one in real trouble or doubt wrote to a newspaper. But today just because they know the paper will speak the exact truth whether it pleases or not, the public really use the columns of advice and respect the opinions expressed through them. All of the community welfare agencies gladly assist in the work, and preserve the strictest confidence in doing so. It is one more service to those who need assistance in meeting and solving their problems and adjusting themselves to situations involving the rights of others. And that is why we do not "say nothing" when we disagree with the reader who seeks advice! We set her straight—whether it pleases her at the time or not. The girl who writes us her intention of eloping with the town ne'er-do-well is probably far from pleased with what we tell her in reply. But ten years hence, married to the town banker, or some other worthwhile citizen, she sends up a prayer for whoever it was who told her just where to head in and why. And so it goes. Some mothers die surrounded by their children. Some die deserted and unmourned. It all depends upon how they brought out the best in their children, and preserved their love and respect. And it is our job to tell them—not to please them! Which would you rather have if you wanted advice yourself? A straight answer founded upon actual experience—or a casual reassurance that left you exactly where you started? Hence the column long may wave! And some 10,000 letters a year seem to testify that columns are needed and advice welcome—whether it pleases or not. Just so it helps.

What Today Means to You

"PISCES."

IF FEBRUARY 20 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 5 p. m. to 6:20 p. m. and from 10 p. m. to 11:20 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 a. m. to 8:40 a. m. and from 3 p. m. to 4:30 p. m.

Indications of the stars for February 20, personal happiness, social successes and business difficulties. Young people will have to grapple with parental opposition in regard to new undertakings and should not turn a deaf ear to well meant advice.

Children born on this February 20 will be plodders, and there are few short-cuts which their brains will permit them to take. They will be assisted all through life by their fund of common sense and the soundness of their characters. They will be independent beings, anxious to do their part.

Born on February 20, your downrightness and simplicity are two traits which you reveal to everybody. You do not have the patience or inclination to beat about the bush—when you want things you ask for them, and when you feel things you say them. The directness of your frontal attacks is often overpowering. You feel hatred for your enemies and it pleases you to deal with them severely; on the other hand it gives you great pleasure to deal generously with those whom you love. You are not easily tempted, and often wrestle with a desire to do something for many months, and then yield in as many seconds.

You have a peaceful temper, but it is not wise to goad you too far, for when aroused there are no limits to your fury. You are ordinarily just, fair and sane, but once you do lose control of your emotions, you are neither responsible for your acts nor your words. Your nature is deeply tender and maternal or paternal. It is easy for you to enter into the joys and sorrows of other people, and you are an understanding person to go to with problems and difficulties.

You are not a spendthrift, and are not unmindful of the proverbial "rainy day." It would greatly gall you to have to assume the role of a human parasite.

Successful people born February 20:

Ernst Athearn Bessey, botanist.

Mary Garden, prima donna.

William Rimmer, sculptor.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

FOOD VALUES IN FRUITS.

A CORRESPONDENT wants to know the number of calories in a certain fruit, implying that his decision about eating it will depend upon the answer. He is on the wrong track.

In their wild state fruits are a product of the plant devised for the purpose of propagation of the species. Somewhere in the structure the plant has located its seed and that is the essential part of the whole. Other parts are merely there—either to protect the seed, to bring about its dissemination, or to produce a bed of organic matter which may help the young sprout with some easily used pappy food to live on during a few hours or days when the roots are forming and pushing their way outward. The meat of the fruit contains a little starch and sugar, a moderate amount of fruit acids, some minerals and vitamins, and much water.

By cultivation and breeding we change wild fruits into the present articles of commerce. Much of the greater part of the change consists in the addition of water. The difference between the small, firm wild plum and the present day, prize-winning plums—the enormous, luscious and luxurious article—is little more than a difference in the amount of water in the two specimens. The two set side by side are a pigmy and a giant. Evaporated to marketable dryness they are not much different in size. When all the juice is squeezed from a large, luscious peach or pear nothing is left but a little pulp, scarcely enough to make a man's size swallow. A large watermelon can be squeezed and then dried and ground into a powder which will weigh only a few ounces.

We eat fruit for its flavor, aroma, taste and palate appeal. We justify ourselves in eating fruit by saying it supplies us with vitamins and minerals and helps to maintain the alkali reserve of the body. These are valid reasons—as valid as the reasons for eating a standard number of calories. Probably most people get too many calories in the day's diet and pay the penalty in overweight and strain on vital organs. So far as we know few, if any, people in North America get too much vitamins and minerals in their diet.

It should be said that there are certain exceptions to these statements. Bananas, being less watery than the general run of fruits, have somewhat more than the usual food values. There are banana flours and, within limits, bananas replace some of the milk and other foods eaten for calories, especially in the diets of children. Dried fruits of several kinds supply considerable calories per pound, principally because of the sugar they contain. Preserved fruits yield a fair amount of calories, this, too, because of the sugar content.

POISONS IN DYE-STUFF.

Mrs. G. W. K. writes: I was told it was better not to wear black stockings because of something in the dye. What is your opinion?

REPLY.

Some dyes are poisonous, and some persons are especially susceptible to poisons of that character. However, black stockings should not be indicted on that basis. They are just as safe as any.

HAY FEVER.

Mrs. S. writes:

1. Is hay fever catching?

2. How long does whooping cough last?

REPLY.

1. No.

2. The peculiar character of the cough may persist for several months. However, the disease is not communicable for longer than five weeks after its onset. The first two weeks are the period of great infectivity.

DRINK MORE WATER.

1,000 TO TAKE PART IN COMMUNION RITE

Fellowship Breakfast to Follow Corporate Service at Epiphany Monday.

By attending a corporate communion service at the Church of the Epiphany and a fellowship breakfast at which former Senator George Wharton Pepper, of Pennsylvania, and the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will speak on "George Washington as a Patriot and Churchman," approximately 1,000 Episcopalian men and boys of the National Capital will inaugurate in an inspiring way next Monday their commemoration of the 200th anniversary of the First President's birth.

The corporate communion will be held at 8 a. m. and Bishop Freeman will be the celebrant, assisted by the Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, rector of the Church of the Epiphany and chaplain of the Senate; Canon Raymond L. Wolven, chaplain, and the Rev. George S. Dudley. This service is expected to be the most notable celebration of the Holy Communion exclusively for Washington men and boys ever held here under the auspices of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, which is in charge of the arrangements.

Directly following the celebration of the communion, the fellowship breakfast will be held in the hall of nations of the Hotel Washington. The two addresses by Mr. Pepper, who is a leading American layman of the Episcopal Church, and Bishop Freeman will be on the theme of the ideals of George Washington as guideposts for the present-day generation, both in their devotion to the Christian faith and in their patriotic loyalty to the American Government and Nation.

Dr. William Earl Clark is the general chairman in charge of the arrangements, being assisted by A. C. Houghton, Dr. W. Sinclair Bowen, H. Rozier Dulaney, jr., N. W. Dorsey, Edwin N. Lewis, James A. DeForce and J. B. Wyckoff.

A large number of new members, consisting of a class of boys and girls, a group of young people, and a considerable number of men and women, will be received during the day. Most of the new members have been won to the church by the work of the people of the church, who have interviewed hundreds of prospective members during the past two weeks.

The large chorus choir will lead the singing at tomorrow's services, and in the evening a great song service will occupy the first half hour.

Christian Science Churches

"Mind" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist tomorrow. The Golden Text is from II Timothy 1:7, "God hath not given us the spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Give me understanding and I shall keep thy law; yea, I shall observe it with my whole heart. I have more understanding than all my teachers; for thy testimonies are my meditation." (Psalms 119:34, 99).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Text Book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Mind, God, sends forth the aroma of Spirit, the atmosphere of intelligence. The belief that a pulpy substance under the skull is mind is a mockery of intelligence, a mimicry of Mind." (Page 191.)

WORK STIMULATION SUNDAY, MARCH 6

Tentative Date Is Set for Capital by Church Federation.

Hearty cooperation with the District committee on unemployment was voted by the Federation of Churches at a meeting of the executive committee on Thursday. This action followed a statement and request by Col. Bliss, chairman of the subcommittee on work creation.

March 6 was set tentatively as "Work Stimulation Sunday" and pastors will be asked to bring this matter definitely before their congregations. Bishop William F. McDowell presided at the meeting and about 30 members were present, representing many of the Protestant churches of Washington. The federation's committee on unemployment was authorized to give all necessary assistance in helping to work out such plans as may be agreed upon.

Similar cooperation was voted the Maryland Bible Society following remarks by its new secretary, Dr. Powers, of Baltimore. The committee on evangelism was instructed to have a conference with him at an early date and report later upon such plans as might be determined upon.

Grant Leet, of the Rotary Club, and several other local leaders spoke in behalf of the setting up of a branch of the Good Will Industries here in Washington. Mr. Hess, business manager of the Baltimore branch, told in detail about their work in behalf of the handicapped. The committee voted to sponsor the initiation of such an undertaking in Washington and to cooperate with other agencies in setting it up when the time is ripe. ARCHBISHOP PLANS FOR BICENTENNIAL Pastoral Letter Authorizes Catholics to Honor Washington.

Archbishop Michael J. Curley has issued a pastoral letter to the clergy and laity of his diocese, urging participation in church and school in the Bicentennial ceremonies. The letter recounts the great deeds of individual Catholics and of Catholic countries in helping this Republic to win its independence, and the friendship that existed between Washington and Catholics.

Bishop John Carroll, the first Catholic Bishop in America, and the founder of Georgetown College, was a friend of Washington and at his death paid him notable tribute in an address in his cathedral. This incident is referred to by Archbishop Curley, whose letter concludes with these words:

"Now, therefore, 132 years after the then citizens of Baltimore heard Bishop John Carroll give expression to his affection and reverence for Washington, whose like we shall scarcely ever see again, your archbishop, who has no hesitation in saying that he yields to no man in his respect and esteem for the Father of his Country, respectfully requests you to comply with the following directions:

In every Catholic school of the Archdiocese the life story of George Washington, already known in general to our children, is to be retold in summarized form. A picture of our first President shall occupy a place of honor in reach building and on a day to be selected by the school superior, suitable exercises shall be held in memory of our illustrious hero. For all of this program the permission and consent of the Superintendent of Schools may be presumed.

In every parish Church of the Archdiocese on a Sunday during this year set aside for the purpose by the pastor, the faithful shall be reminded of the blessings of freedom, civil and religious, which came to us with the happy outcome of the revolution. Under God we have much for which gratitude is due Washington, whom without exaggeration, we may consider as God's instrument in effecting the welcome change from conditions in 1750 to those of 1932.

Catholic organizations and societies, religious and fraternal, are requested to co-operate with all civic plans for the celebration of the Washington bicentenial.

On a day to be named later, the Catholics of the Archdiocese will be invited to attend an Archdiocesan Celebration in the stadium of the Catholic University in memory of Washington.

He is also a Chevalier of the Order of St. Margaret, an honor bestowed upon him in Manchester, England.

Churches of Capital Tomorrow Will Pay Tribute And Honor to George Washington on Eve of Fete

Elaborate Bicentennial Exercises Will Be Had at Cathedral.

Throughout the Nation tomorrow patriotic services will be held in most of the churches of all faiths commemorating the birth of Washington, the Father of our Country. There never was in the history of this republic just such a religious celebration, in which the virtues of a human being were held up to a whole Nation as worthy of emulation.

In the Nation's Capital the celebration will be widespread. Most of the churches will have a religious-patriotic service in which the relation of the two as emphasized in the life and character of Washington will be shown.

As a member of the Church of England and then of the Protestant Episcopal Church of America, Gen. Washington's memory has a powerful hold on that denomination. And so the exercises at the Washington Cathedral will be quite elaborate and impressive.

Washington Cathedral.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, bishop of Washington, will preach over the radio from the Bethlehem Chapel of Washington Cathedral tomorrow afternoon, taking as his theme the patriotic and religious ideals of the first President's life and the mark which he has left upon the American nation and its government.

Another notable service in observance of the Bicentennial will be held in the Bethlehem Chapel in the morning at which the Rev. Dr. W. L. De Vries, precentor of the Cathedral, will preach. His sermon will deal to a large extent with the Nation-wide significance of the Cathedral as the fulfillment of Washington's vision for "a church for national purposes" in the Federal Capital. In the Bethelehem Chapel Woodrow Wilson, the twenty-eighth President of the United States, is entombed.

In another Cathedral crypt Chapel, St. Joseph of Arimathea, a special service will also be held in the morning for a delegation of approximately 100 members of the New Jersey Order of De Molay, visiting the Capital for the opening of the Bicentennial. Canon Edward S. Dunlap, historian of the Cathedral's Bicentennial committee, will preach at this service.

Washington Heights Church.

A rather different note from most of the sermons that will be preached will be struck by the minister of Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, Dr. John C. Palmer, who has taken for his subject, "The Church of the Burning Bush or Presbyterians' Heroic Contribution Toward American Independence." In Scotland the seal of the old Covenanting Church is the "burning bush," and because of this it has come to be known as the Church of the Burning Bush. From this Scotch Presbyterian Church there came a host of men and women, some of whom were intimate friends of Washington, and who, when the hour struck, rose as a man in support of American independence.

Dr. Palmer, being also a leading Mason, will have chief part on the program tomorrow night, when the Masons and citizens of Alexandria will celebrate the virtues of Washington in a service to be held in the Old Presbyterian Meeting House.

In the service at Washington Heights Church the music will be in charge of Mrs. Charles Brooks Smith, who will play a prelude by Bodovinski and as a postlude Bach's E Minor. George Myers, the tenor soloist, will sing Kipling's "Recessional," and the hymns of the day will be patriotic.

Church of the Epiphany.

The services at the Church of the Epiphany will be patriotic throughout. In the morning at 11 o'clock the rector will preach on George Washington and in the afternoon at 4 o'clock, under the auspices of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution, there will be held the annual service of the society, with the massing of the colors and appropriate music.

The special preacher at this service will be the Right Rev. Robert E. L. Strider, Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of West Virginia, whose subject will be "George Washington, Citizen, Christian, and Patriot." At the evening service, at 8 o'clock, the special preacher will be the Right Rev. Clinton S. Quin, Bishop of Texas, who will take for his theme "The Father of His Country." The public is most cordially invited to all these services.

National City Christian Church.

Dr. H. H. Harmon, the newly appointed minister of the National City Christian Church, will devote both of the services tomorrow to the patriotic celebration. In the morning he will preach a special sermon on "A Great Life—Its Challenge," and at 8 p. m. Dr. Augustus O. Thomas, secretary general World Federation of Educational Associations, will speak on "From the Days of Washington." A feature of the morning service will be a violin solo by Miss Bernice Bird, of Philadelphia.

Universalist Church.

In addition to a special sermon in the morning by the minister, Dr. F. W. Perkins, the vesetd choir of the Universalist National Memorial Church, under the direction of Dr. Alfred W. Harned, will give a special program. The music has been chosen from the works of Haydn, Handel and Bach, contemporaries of Washington. Also the Chorale from the American Symphony, by Bloc, will be sung.

Mt. Pleasant Congregational Church.

Three organizations of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church will give special recognition to the program of the George Washington Bicentennial tomorrow. The Young People's Forum and the discussion group will assemble at the close of its regular meetings and go as organizations to the performance of the masque "Wakefield," and twelve members of the Mount Pleasant Players will have parts in the performance.

The players, under the leadership of Elroy LaCross, will represent the twelve apostles, with the following cast: Peter, Elroy LaCross; James, William Russell; Andrew, William Powell; John, Frederick Vechery; Philip, John Perry; Bartholomew, William Kilgore; Thomas, Huber Nash; Matthew, Benjamin Catchings; James the Less, Harold Toynton; Thaddeus, Donald Marsh; Simon the Cananean, Casson Crittendon; Nathaniel, Phillip Irey.

This oration is the result of eight years of special research work in the life of the human Washington.

The Army, Navy, Marines and militia will tender high honors on this occasion, sending prominent leaders and colors to the event.

Among the distinguished guests of the service will be Maj. Gen. Lytle S. Brown, chief of engineers of the U. S. Army; Admiral Upham, U. S. Navy; Maj. Gen. J. T. Myers, Marine Corps; Maj. Gen. Anton Stephan, Maj. Sydney Morgan and Capt. Roy of the National Guards of the District of Columbia.

Commissioner Newcomb of the Court of Claims will be marshall, the pastor, Frederick Vining Fisher, will preside. The young men's fraternity of Ingram Church are the hosts of the evening.

Georgetown Presbyterian Church.

At the morning hour, the minister, the Rev. Frank S. Niles, will preach on "The Faith of George Washington." He will also deliver the last of a series of four story-sermons for children on the life of Washington.

St. Paul's Lutheran Church.

A tablet, showing Gen. Washington at Trenton will be unveiled at St. Paul's Lutheran Church tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. It is the gift of the Dr. Samuel Domer Bible class. The Daughters of the American Revolution and the diplomatic representatives from Lutheran countries have been invited to attend.

In the service the minister, Dr. Henry W. Snyder, will emphasize the relations that existed between Gen. Washington and Gen. Peter Muhlenberg, "the fighting parson of the Revolution," whose statue is to be placed in front of St. Paul's. Gen. Muhlenberg was at one time pastor of a Lutheran Church at Woodstock, Va.

All Souls' Unitarian Church.

The program at All Souls' Church (Unitarian), Sixteenth and Harvard streets, is particularly full. In the various departments of the Church school, services in keeping with the day have been arranged. At the 11 o'clock service of worship, the minister, Ulysses G. B. Pierce, will preach on the subject: "Religion—Conventional or Vital?" In the afternoon at 5 o'clock, Lewis Corning Atwater, organist, will be assisted in a program of music of Washington's time by Charles Trowbridge Tittmann, bass. This will be followed at 5:30 by a book chat. Miss Helen Nicolay will review her own recent book, "A Boy's Life of George Washington."

Covenant-First Presbyterian Church.

At the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, Dr. McCartney will take as his subject "The American Dream." There is a special musical program arranged to fit in with the celebration. Huston Thompson, a publicist and orator, will speak in the evening at 7 to the Covenant Fellowship Club of the church, on "The Religious Life of George Washington."

Grace Episcopal Church.

A patriotic service will be held in the evening, at 8:15 o'clock in Grace Episcopal Church, the Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde, rector.

The Rev. Henry W. Tolson, of the Westminster Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Charles S. Biggs, of Ryland Methodist Church; the Rev. F. C. Yarnall, of Epiphany Chapel; the Rev. A. E. Owens, of Marvin Methodist Church; the Rev. Thomas Daniels, of the Greek Orthodox Church, and the Rev. Father Burke, of St. Dominic's Roman Catholic Church.

A military feature will be given the service by the carrying of the national colors in the procession and the presence of a bugler from the Army War College, who will give "the church call" before the Processional Hymn, sound the call to colors after the presentation of alms, and blow "taps" immediately after the benediction. Music of appropriate character will be furnished by the vested choir—the offertory anthem, "He Maketh War to Cease" (John Pringle Scott), will be sung by Francis W. Hart, barytone.

The school superintendent, Wilbur Snyder, will be assisted by Dewey Gardner, John Lartz and Howard Beltz. Mr. Seaquist, the president of the Manor Park Citizens Association, will turn the first shovel of dirt followed by representatives of all of the school and church departments. Little Miss Martha Brock and Chester Cavalier will take the part of Martha and George Washington. The two church choirs will participate. Following the tree planting the congregation will gather for the service in the church auditorium, at which time Mrs. Milton Otterback, as president of the Guild, will present a flag to the church.

DEMPSEY SEEKS SECOND BATTLE WITH LEVINSKY

Burke, Other Stars, Bow At Tampa

Metz and MacFarlane, Comedalists, Win in 2 Matches.

PALMACEIA GOLF CLUB, Tampa, Fla., Feb. 19 (A.P.).—Big money campaigners of American golfdom headed by Billy Burke, national open champion, were brushed aside today as match play of the $4,000 Gasparilla open tournament here moved through the second round.

Burke, in trouble with his approach game, was eliminated in the first round by Ray Mangrum, of Los Angeles, 1 up. Mangrum beat Tony Butler, Corpus Christi, Tex., 2 and 1 in the second round.

Into the ranks of the spectators with Burke went former national open champions also—Johnny Farrell, of St. Augustine; Joe Turnesa, of Elmsford, N. Y., and Gene Sarazen, of Great Neck, Long Island.

The comedalists, Dick Metz, San Angelo, Tex., youth, and the veteran, Willie Macfarlane, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., himself a former national open champion, went to the quarter finals. Others who advanced were Walter Hagen, of Detroit; Paul Runyan, of Westchester, N. Y.; Tony Manero, of Elmhurst, N. Y.; Bill Mehlhorn, of New York, and Eddie Schultz, of Troy, N. Y.

Runyan Defeats Farrell.

Farrell, shooting a steady game, was defeated 2 up as Runyan won the eighteenth hole with a birdie four. Farrell, defeated John Golden, of Stamford, Conn., 1 up in 20 holes in the first round.

Turnesa dropped out in the first round as Lewis Chiopetta, of Clearwater, Fla., beat him 4 and 3.

Macfarlane, was on his game and his victims were Herman Barrow, of Portchester, N. Y., in the first round, 1 up, and Basil Brook, of Bartow, Fla., 4 and 3 in the second round.

Hagen beat Ralph Kingsrud, of Fargo, N. Dak., 3 and 1 in the second round, after eliminating Clarence Clark, of Bloomfield, N. J., 2 and 1 in the first round. Kingsrud's putting was erratic, cracking after he eliminated Neil McIntyre, of Indianapolis, 4 and 3, in the morning.

Wiffy Cox Bows To Manero.

Manero eliminated Wiffy Cox, of Brooklyn, 3 and 2, in the second round. Cox beat Denny Shute, of Cleveland, 2 and 1, in the first round and Manero beat Victor Brook, of Lakeland, Fla., 1 up in 21 holes.

Mehlhorn, who defeated Lighthorse Harry Cooper, of Chicago, 1 up in the morning, came back in the afternoon to eliminate Chiopetta, conqueror of Turnesa, 4 and 3.

Marine Five Defeats Carlisle Barracks, 44-31

Special to The Washington Post.

Quantico, Va., Feb. 19.—The Quantico Marines added another name to their growing list of victims when they took measure of the Carlisle, Pa., Barracks quintet by a score of 44 to 31 here tonight. The final outcome was never in doubt.

With Sergt. Locke paving the way, the Leathernecks assumed a 19 to 6 advantage in the first period. They added 10 points in the second quarter to lead by a score of 29 to 11 at the half. Locke, who played only in the first half, scored 20 points for the home team. Carlisle rallied in the third period, but the Marine lead was too great to overcome. Nollen played well for the losers.

Webb Shifts Line-Up Of Navy Ring Team

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 19.—Two changes have been made in the line-up of the Navy boxing team for the bouts with representatives of North Carolina University tomorrow night, Head Coach "Spike" Webb announced today.

The shifts will be in the feather and light weight classes, Webb said. In the former, A. A. Dolan, class of 1933, Dawson, Minn., the youth who made such an impressive showing in last Saturday's meet with New Hampshire that he has been given the call over A. L. Miller, 1934, of Fairbanks, Alaska. Herb Fulmer, 1933, of St. Louis, intercollegiate lightweight champion last year, was defeated by his opponent in both the Louisiana State and New Hampshire engagements, via the knockout route, and he has been displaced by N. K. Nauman, 1934, of Franklin, Kans. A change also may be made in the unlimited weight class, Webb said, Tom Chambers, football tackle, relieving Sunshine Jim Reedy, captain, and guard of the 1932 eleven.

Despite the big athletic carnival to be put on by the Middies, St. John's College will stage a double-header basket ball game tomorrow night, its varsity and freshmen teams meeting Western Maryland quints.

Peterson Defeats Ribas In Fancy Billiards Match

By BOB CONSIDINE.

CHARLIE PETERSON, an inoffensive looking gentleman from St. Louis with the gentle and bored presence of a waiter, picked up four precious points in the first world's championship of fancy shot billiards last night at the Knights of Columbus Hall, by defeating Isidro Ribas, another good waiter, 104 to 108, while a small crowd of sedentary sports peered out of the darkness around the table and cheered the ability of both Peterson and Ribas to make a cue ball stand up on one toe and recite the Emancipation Proclamation backward.

Peterson's 4-point advantage last night whittled the lead of Ribas to one "kiss," 837 to 838, in the great match which started in ice-bound St. Louis three weeks ago, was continued in Chicago last week, and will go from here to New York and wind up, in oratorical fashion, on the sunkist shore of Havana.

Running through what Peterson termed were the 34 hardest shots in their chosen profession, both masters gave thrilling exhibitions, coming down the stretch abreast of one another and going into the thirty-fourth test tied at 103 to 103. This was what is called a combination, with long masse. Peterson placed the white and red up in one corner, got down the other end of the table and cracked the other ball. It broke back and forth about the table, too fast for the inexperienced eye to follow, and, after a while began to roll slowly for the far corner. Peterson skipped around the table, got up over the two balls in the corner and plunked straight down on them. One started, stopped and shot backward down the table, meeting the ball which had been bounding about the place.

The match had uproarous interludes. The two boys argued long and loudly three times. On test 14, a difficult forced follow, Ribas wanted to change the position of the balls. Peterson appeared out of the sideline gloom and firmly put the balls back. Ribas waved arms. Peterson stood by, sorrowful but adamant. Ribas forgot his three American words and called his interpreter, and a three-cornered wrangle developed which was settled without the aid of the World Court.

The two will meet on the same table twice again today, this afternoon at 3 o'clock and tonight at 8:30 o'clock. They promise 34 more impossible shots at each performance.

Carolina Five Beats Md., 32 to 26

1931 Conference Winners Outplayed in Second Half.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Feb. 19.—North Carolina's white phantoms rose to glory and toppled Maryland's Southern Champions tonight, 32 to 26, in one of the fastest, most thrilling games seen here in many moons.

The teams fought an 18-to-18 deadlock for the first half. The lead changed four times and at one stage Wilmer Hines, star Carolina forward, shot three loopers in one minute to put Carolina out front 9 to 7.

It was Maryland's first defeat in fifteen games, also its first in Southern Conference competition this year, and local experts were surprised inasmuch as Maryland had been improving constantly.

The shooting of Hines and Edwards, Tarheel center, within the Maryland zone defense was well nigh unstoppable. This pair consistently found openings in the defense from which they were able to secure easy shots. Hines led the scorers of both teams with five field goals for a total of 10 points, while Edwards was only 1 point behind him. Weathers contributed 7 points to the Carolina total.

Ed Ronkin showed the way in scoring for the visitors, accounting for 9 points. Bozie Berger, Maryland's all-American guard, suffered an "off night" and scored only 6 points. Coach Burton Shipley used nine of his men in an effort to hit upon a winning combination.

Missed Putt Costs Helen Hicks Title

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 19 (A.P.).—A four-foot missed putt today cost Helen Hicks, national women's champion, the Florida women's golf crown. Maureen Orcutt, Englewood, N. J., defeated the champion in a gruelling match, one up in 19 holes, to send the competition for permanent possession of the trophy into a three-way tie.

Miss Hicks was one up as they came to the eighteenth and were three on the green. The champion needing only to halve the hole by dropping a four-foot putt. She missed it by six inches. Miss Orcutt sank her putt and sent the match into an extra hole.

Both landed just off the nineteenth green far from the cup in two. Miss Hicks with a 25-footer before her, stroked carefully and the ball rolled straight toward the cup, crossed it and failed to drop.

Miss Orcutt's putt was 20 feet. After studying the lie of the ground she chipped the ball instead of putting it and it rolled in, giving her the match. One of the features of the match was an eagle two scored on the fifth hole by Miss Orcutt. She sent a screaming iron shot 170 yards dead to the pin and it trickled in the hole as the crowd cheered. A number three iron was used for the feat.

NEW BELLEAIRE CHAMPION.

In the only other contest for home consumption, Gallaudet will entertain Columbus University in a basket ball game at Kendall Green, starting at 8 o'clock.

Seven other local teams will be busy in other parts of the country.

Three bouts stand out on the Maryland-North Carolina State card. Rhyne, the Wolfpack's lightweight, is undefeated, and will meet Frank Isemann, one of Maryland's best. Perritt, visiting welterweight, will engage Bernard Keener, the Old Line's hardest puncher. Hull, the visitors' light-heavy, and Jim Loughran, representing Maryland, will clash in another prospective thriller. Maryland had no heavyweight to oppose Red Espey, State's football and boxing star.

Johnson Leads Lean Squad Of Nats Southward Today

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

MANAGER WALTER JOHNSON this morning leads the vanguard of Nationals from the Capital to the Biloxi training base, where he hopes to whip his charges into form which will give Washington a third American League pennant.

The Nat leader will be in the position of the hen with one chick as he boards the rattler at Union Station, for John Boyle, a rookie right-handed pitcher from the Bayonne, N. J., sandlots, will be the only player leaving here. The others in the party will be Coaches "Uncle Nick" Altrock and Al Schacht and a flock of local scribes and photographers.

Only two players will join the party en route, "Bud" Thomas, last year's Olmsted Grill star flinger, who has been signed by Chattanooga, but who will train with the Nats, being due to board the train at Charlottesville, while Catcher Cliff Bolton will be picked up at his home at High Point, N. C.

All of the catchers and pitchers who have signed contracts for the coming season have been ordered to report at the Mississippi base in time to start conditioning work Monday. Pitcher Lloyd Brown is already at camp, along with Trainers Mike Martin and Frank (Bobo) Baxter, while Pitchers Carl Fischer and Al Crowder are motoring there now.

The others are due to head for camp direct from their homes, as follows: Catcher Howard Maple, from Portland, Oreg.; Catcher-Coach Patsy Gharrity, from Beloit, Wis.; Pitchers Monte Weaver, from Hilton, N. C.; Mike Delaney, from Chicago; Robert Friedrich, from Cincinnati; Lynn Griffith, from Bryan, Tex., and Frank Ragland, from Paris, Miss.

As to the plans of Pitchers Fred Marberry and Bob Burke and Catcher Roy Spencer, little is known. Marberry stated some time ago that he planned to go to camp with his contract in his pocket for a personal conference with President Clark Griffith and probably will do so, but indications are that the other two will remain at their respective homes until they come to salary terms with the club.

GUARDS WIN FROM C. U., 35 TO 28

Sheary's Star Play Is Futile; Cardinals Fight to End.

Special to The Washington Past.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 19.—Catholic University's Basket Ball Team made more than one game bid for victory over the Seventh Regiment tossers here tonight, but the National Guard soldiers finally won the nip-and-tuck affair, 35 to 28. The score was tied six times in the second half after the Militiamen had held a slight 17-to-15 lead at half time.

Bobby Watson, a substitute on Columbia University's 1928 championship team of the Intercollegiate League, and Perrine and Rockafellow, the famous tennis partner of Bill Aydelotte on the indoor championship combination, were the men who halted Catholic U. Watson went on a scoring spree for the first time this year, caging 7 field goals. Three shots of his in the last 5 minutes of play gave the soldiers the biggest lead that they held at any time.

Capt. Sheary played a great game for Catholic U. but it was the hard luck play of White that probably cost the visitors the game. White made many spectacular efforts that rimmed the basket and popped out again in tantalizing fashion.

G. U. QUINTET BEATEN BY 50 TO 28

West Virginia Gains Revenge, Leading From Start.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Feb. 19 West Virginia University cagers tonight avenged the licking which Georgetown University administered to them in Washington last week by overwhelming the Hoya basket ball team, 50 to 28.

Eddie Cubbon, star Mountaineer center, was the kingpin of the victors' offense, getting seven goals for high point honors. Every man on the West Virginia squad was used in the game and all but two of them broke into the scoring column.

Crowley, playing a guard position for Georgetown, led his team in scoring with four field goals and two fouls. The visitors seemed to get plenty of shots, but they were rushed and missed almost constantly in the first half, when only two field goals netted.

West Virginia took the lead on almost the first play of the game and never once relinquished it. Six minutes playing time had elapsed and the Mountaineers scored nine points before McLaughlin looped a free throw for his team's first point.

TERRY SIGNS CONTRACT FOR 1932

Player and Giants Satisfied Following 2 Conferences.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 19 (A.P.).—Bill Terry's lengthy argument with the New York Giants over his pay envelope for 1932 ended amicably today when the first baseman emerged from a fifteen-minute afternoon conference with Manager John McGraw and admitted he had signed on the dotted line.

The Memphis holdout, reported to have received $22,000 last year and who said recently he would rather quit the game than take a suggested 40 per cent salary cut, smiled as he admitted coming to undivulged terms. McGraw grinned and announced:

"We have come to terms and we are both satisfied. I know I am." Later he added: "No, there will be no announcement on the contract's stipulations. We never give out figures."

Terry came here today in answer to a summons from the Giant manager, who, with Mrs. McGraw, is en route to Los Angeles.

They held a morning conference which brought an announcement from McGraw that they had not reached an agreement. The afternoon session, however, was brief and successful.

American Rally Wins, 31 to 29 Over P. M. C.

Special to The Washington Post.

Chester, Pa., Feb. 19.—American University basketers, who conquered the Navy five, defeated Pennsylvania Military College, 31 to 29, in a fast game here tonight.

The first half closed 22 to 18 in favor of American, but the issue was in doubt until the last half minute. The score was tied four times in the final stanza.

American was leading, 23 to 22, when a foul by Britten evened the score. A field goal by Cook gave P. M. C. the lead which the Cadets maintained until a half-minute before closing time, when a field goal by Fuchs and a foul goal by Dick gave the game to American University.

Dick starred for the visitors with eleven points while Cook was high scorer for P. M. C. with 9 points.

Brown Minimizes Weiner; Signs for Bout at Garden

By JACK ESPEY.

NATIE BROWN, one of the busiest leather-traders in the pugilistic industry, and certainly one of the cockiest, is so sure of himself regarding his chances against Herman Weiner, Baltimore heavyweight, in the Day Nursery feature bout next Tuesday night at Portner's Arena, that he has signed articles to perform the Friday night following in Madison Square Garden.

That's thinking a lot of his ability, this Brown, but he is just that sort of fellow, his cup of confidence running over until you're knee deep in it. The New York engagement means more to his pocketbook and his future than the Alexandria bout, and in order to capitalize on it he must first dispose of Weiner. A defeat from the Baltimore lad, who is practically unknown above the Mason-Dixon line, would pretty nearly kayo Natie's attractiveness as far as Madison Square Garden is concerned.

In reality, Weiner does have a good chance of winning and Brown is taking a big gamble. Brown realizes that Weiner has a mighty left hook, a blow that has floored Reds Barry and Marty Gallagher, both for nine counts, before local audiences. And Brown knows that that same blow will smash him, too, if Herman connects squarely.

The question is, can Weiner hold off Brown long enough to insert his deadly wallop? In previous performances at Alexandria, Natie has proved a steadily-boring-in type of fighter. Brown crowded both Barry and Gallagher all the time, shooting his punches mostly to the body. It remains to be seen whether the Baltimorean can stave off his rushing tactics in order to put over the dynamic left hook which comes up from the floor.

With his left, Weiner seems a better bet right now than Brown to win by a knockout. Brown as yet hasn't exhibited a knockout punch. Then, too, there is a reasonable doubt that Brown can wear down Weiner with his touted body attack, for Herman has shown beyond question—the Gallagher fight, for instance—that he can absorb punishment.

All of which makes the forthcoming battle for the "District heavyweight championship" one of the most interesting since Barry and Gallagher packed 'em in at Fort Washington last October.

10-Rounder Objective of Promoters

Old Mauler Eager for Second Battle With 6-Ounce Gloves.

Says He Wasn't at Best When Beaten by Levinsky.

By CHARLES DUNKLEY.

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 19 (A.P.).—There was one big man in the boxing world tonight who was certain that Jack Dempsey still could come back.

It was the old Manassa mauler himself.

Surrounded by his faithful old trainer, Jerry "the Greek" Louvadis, and his closest friends, Dempsey today carefully digested all the accounts of his whirlwind four-round exhibition against King Levinsky at the Chicago Stadium last night, read the almost unanimous opinion of the experts that Levinsky had won and then scowled.

"So they think I'm through again, eh?" Dempsey blurted out.

"Well, I'm not. I'm going right on. I'll be back. I'll fight Levinsky ten rounds with six-ounce gloves instead of the ten-ounce gloves we wore last night. I still can sock with the regulation fighting gloves on."

Dempsey to Keep Going.

Dempsey may not get a chance to fight Max Schmeling, the title holder, but he is determined to carry on in the hope of proving that he can do better than he did last night.

Dempsey isn't the kind of make excuses or offer alibis, but he did make the emphatic statement that he wasn't right against the Kingfish, declaring that he had suffered from colds that forced him to bed nine times during the last 30 days.

"You know that I never give alibis," Dempsey said, "but I think my showing last night—an off night for me—was largely due to my cold. My head wasn't clear and I was bothered throughout the match by inability to breathe. I don't want to take any glory away from Levinsky. He is better than you think he is, he has courage, can punch and has the makings of a good fighter."

There is a possibility that Dempsey may fight Levinsky in a ten-round bout under the auspices of the Chicago Stadium, in Soldier Field this summer. The match was offered Dempsey and he indicated that he would accept. The cocksure Levinsky had no sooner reached his dressing room when he expressed a desire to meet Dempsey in a ten-round bout.

Exhibits Tuesday At Louisville.

In a formal statement, Leonard Sachs, representing Dempsey, announced that the old Manassa mauler will kept right on with his exhibition tour, resuming in Louisville, Ky., next Tuesday night, and following this with another exhibition in Dayton, Ohio, February 29. The itinerary after those two engagements has not been completed.

Sachs said he would run the exhibition tour into April, but would see that Dempsey had more time to himself, avoiding the strain of attending outside functions, and also arrange to have a greater period of rest between exhibitions.

The record-smashing crowd that jammed the Chicago Stadium last night gave Dempsey, most magnetic personality in boxing, the distinction of drawing the largest crowds in the history of the sport, both indoors and outdoors.

Dempsey and Tunney drew the outdoor record crowd with some 147,000 spectators at Soldier Field, on September 22, 1927. Last night's official figures were 23,322 paid admissions, eclipsing the former record by almost a thousand. The gross receipts were $74,616.25.

Dempsey will be paid $28,909.35 for exposing his jaw to Levinsky's blasts, while Levinsky will take down $9,686.45 as his share of the purse, representing 15 per cent of the net receipts. Dempsey got 45 per cent of $64,243.55, which was the net after deductions for taxes.

W. L. "Young" Stribling, who witnessed the Levinsky-Dempsey bout, had a word of cheer today for the showing of the former world's heavyweight champion. He said that the condition of the two men could not be compared because Levinsky has been doing road work and other serious training, whereas Dempsey has confined his training exclusively to gymnasium work.

"Dempsey looked good to me," said Stribling, "but you really can not get a line on him until he has had proper training, which means intensive road work to strengthen the legs. Road work means a great deal to a fighter who has a hard match in prospect. Dempsey has not been training for a fight—merely exhibitions. Last night he ran into a terrific fight."

Perkins-Tryon Gain Semifinals in Florida

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 19 (A.P.).—Phillip Perkins, former British amateur champion, and Howard Tryon, Detroit, strode far into the van of favorites today as they won their quarter-final match in the international amateur four-ball matches here, 11 to 10, from J. B. Ryerson, Cooperstown, N. Y., and A. R. Hakes, Dunkirk, N. Y.

The winners had a best ball card of 34, 39—73 for the morning eighteen holes, and a best ball 30 for the eight holes of afternoon play.

Pirate Pitching Aces Join Holdout Brigade

Kansas City, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—Pitchers Heinie Meine and Erwin Brame, stars of the Pittsburgh Pirates, appeared to have joined the holdout brigade today.

When the advance guard of the Bucs steamed out of here last night en route to Paso Robles, Calif., for spring training, Meine and Brame were noticeably absent. They were to have joined the party here. Reports from Pittsburgh intimated the boys want more money.

MARTIS SCORES OVER PRINCE TOKALON IN MIAMI FEATURE

Mills Pilots 2 Hialeah Winners

Hand Rides Martis to Victory in Duel in Stretch.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Feb. 19 (A. P.).—After winning four straight races in Florida, Prince Tokalon met his waterloo today when he ran up against Martis and Jockey Hank Mills. Dewey Bentham's 5-year-old won the Orange Blossom Handicap of 1 mile in a great finish, Prince Takolon losing the purse by a head. Uluniu was four lengths away, in third place. Islam and My Dandy brought up the rear.

Martis paid $12.90 for $2 and ran the eight panels in 1:37 2-5. Mills rode a nice race. He rated Martis behind My Dandy and Prince Tokalon for 5 furlongs. My Dandy set the pace, going easily, but after rounding out of the back stretch ... ince Tokalon spurted and forced Charlie Allen to go to the whip on the pacemaker. Mills brought Martis around the leaders a turning into the stretch, and began to hand ride for all he was worth. My Dandy dropped entirely out of it and Prince Tokalon held on gamely, but Martis had too much left and under strong handling got to the front in the final stages. Uluniu closed well to beat Islam, which was a slow beginner.

Mills Scores With Ben Blair.

Hank Mills again completed a double when he guided Ben Blair to a thrilling victory in the closing event. The gelding beat Bounding Deep by a nose, while the latter was another nose before Big Bo. The winner paid $16.60.

General A, paying the surprisingly big price of $60.50 for $2, was a driving victor over the heavily played Double Heart in the fourth number. Jamison, after being outrun to the stretch, closed very fast to annex third money. Claremont and Bacciocco killed each other's chances by racing like a team for a half mile while General A, was rated in third position. The leaders tired after straightening out in the stretch and left the issue to General A and Double Heart. The latter got up to almost even terms with the winner but was outlasted.

Weideleen Repeats At Jefferson.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 19 (A.P.)—E. F. Prichard's Weideleen, a four-year-old son of Paul Weidel, won his second race of the winter season when he accounted for the Orleander Purse, a six furlong event styled for fillies and mares, at the Fair Grounds today.

Weideleen set all of the pace to win by a length from Gallaher and Combs' Plumage with James Poland's My Sweets third.

The Prichard filly never was pushed with the result she ran the distance in the slow time of 1.14. She returned $9.80 for $2 in the mutuels.

Harris Leads Tigers Over California Hills

Chico, Calif., Feb. 19 (A.P.).—Led by Manager Bucky Harris, nineteen members of the Detroit Tigers Club hiked out over the hills today to open the spring training routine of the American League outfit. The program for the next ten days will be one mostly of walking followed by "boiling out" in hot mineral baths.

Six more players were slated to arrive today with others on the way. The total squad here will number 30.

Burke, Columbus Heavy, Faces Test on Monday

A radically improved youngster will parade his wares on the stage of the Strand Theater Monday night when Columbus University's boxing team plays host to the University of South Carolina. Raymond (Reds) Burke, 180-pound novice who surprised by dueling Springfield College's unlimited entry to a draw last week, likely will exhibit surprising polish when the mixing starts.

Just how far Burke has progressed should be definitely ascertained from his mix-up with J. R. DeVaughn, giant South Carolinian. Standing 6 feet and 2 inches and weighing 185, the big fellow shades his opponent both in size and experience.

Athletic books good for these bouts remain on sale at Goldie Ahearn's, Vic's Sport Shop and Spalding's.

MAEANTIC broke rapidly from the outside. He bore over to the rail at the three-sixteenths pole, making a nasty jam causing several of the field to pull up. MAEANTIC was drawing away at end. WHITE THORN was a keen factor until final furlong, when he began to tire. BOLILEE outgamed WANDEROO when it came to a drive. Latter broke fast and ran straight.

He was rated close to pace for five furlongs, wore down PRETTY PENNY and, taking command, held a slight advantage under hand riding in a hard drive. BOUNDING DEEP, out-run for six furlongs, closed steadily on the inside through stretch. BIG BO found his stride after leaving back stretch and made up considerable ground. PRINCE TOY was always well up. MOROCCO was outrun. PRETTY PENNY quit entering stretch.

—Hialeah Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS

HIALEAH Park, Miami, Fla., Feb. 19—The first important juvenile stake for colts and geldings heads an interesting program at Hileah Park today. The Nursery Stakes, a three furlong dash, received a list of 20 eligibles in the overnight entries, with several promising 2-year olds, among the list.

R. W. Collins holds a strong chance to capture the honors with his brilliant colt, LEVAAL. This clever, long-striding son of Le O'Cotner has displayed exceptional speed in recent efforts and with several conditioning races, has qualified handsomely. OKAPI, another highly regarded juvenile, raced creditably with the leaders of this division and is accorded the place. STRAIGHT JACKET, favored by his outside post position, is the show selection.

FIRST RACE—A cheap band of maiden platers will cavort in the six furlongs of the opening event. LUCKY JACK has shown improvement recently and may graduate. BLACK SIGNAL has been rested up since his second and figures to furnish the opposition. TUMBLING GLASS appears best of the others.

SECOND RACE—Older platers have been entered in the second event, a gallop at one mile. FETISH closed considerable ground in his last start and against this mediocre field should score. TACK and TEA CRACKER are closely rated for the place positions but should finish in that order.

THIRD RACE—HIEOVER is meeting his own class in the 6 furlongs of the third event and given the call over his thirteen rivals. BLACK DOVE, a beaten favorite last start, should finish in the runner-up position, with SUN TEATIME third.

FOURTH RACE—JAMES RIVER, from the G. D. Widener string, holds a decided edge over his rivals in the mile of the fourth. SOUTHCO has trained well since his last start and should battle it out with the top one. RUBRIDGE, a surprise winner last outing, is favored for the show.

SIXTH RACE—In the mile of the sixth event WAR SAINT is dropping down in this number and figures best of the seven platers which will oppose him. MY SIS has turned in several smart moves and is on edge. The J. P. Musgrave color bearer should hold STARBOARD LIGHT safe for the place. The latter has raced consistently over a route and may find the mile distance a trifle short. However, the Eckman entrant should finish in the money.

SEVENTH RACE—The final event on the card is fashioned for 4-year-olds and upward, a test over the gruelling mile and a quarter distance. BOZO, left at the post in his last attempt, figures to redeem himself in this 10-furlong gallop. TOP HATTIE will favor the route and is favored for the place, with WORKLESS, a likely improver, selected for the minor award.

TWO-A-WEEK WRESTLING PROGRAM

Turner to Stage Mat Shows at Auditorium, Strand, Is Rumor.

STRONG rumors pervaded Washington yesterday that Matchmaker Joe Turner, of the local wrestling trust, will soon offer two cards of grappling a week, the regular Thursday night meeting at the Auditorium, plus a Saturday night show at the Strand, with cheaper prices in effect.

If the move eventuates it will set a new high from the mat game in Washington, whose burghers until a trifle more than two years ago cast a lacklustre eye upon the game of growl and groan.

The Strand will be utilized again next Thursday, and the card will be headed by an engagement between Sandor Szabo and Tiny Roebuck. Szabo beat Roebuck two and a half months ago, at the Auditorium, after taking one of the sincerest beatings ever administered in a local ring.

Roebuck Faster, More Aggressive.

Since that time Tiny has established a great record. He has tasted defeat but once, and that at the hands of Strangler Lewis. He is faster and more aggressive.

A second finish match will mark the card. This will mate Doc Wilson and Leon Smith, a Chicago hefty who holds a victory over Karl Pojello.

Fritz Kley, a heavyweight acrobat, will be back on the bill, in all probability this time against Wankah Zelesniak.

Sammy Stein, who wins the Jewish championship every week in New York from Herb Freeman, brings his kit of flying tackles and his manly chassis to town again, with one Paul Favre as the target.

D. C. Youth to Captain Harvard Freshman Five

Richard G. Fletcher, former Western High and St. Alban's athlete, who won the Harvard scholarship offered last year by the Harvard Club of Washington, was elected captain of the Harvard freshmen basket ball team yesterday, at Cambridge, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

Fletcher, who is 18, was a captain of the cadets and member of the baseball and tennis teams at Western. He did not start to play basket ball until last winter, after he entered St. Alban's.

Dumbarton Net Team Faces League Leaders

The Dumbarton netmen, one of Washington's two teams in the Baltimore Winter Indoor Tennis League, play their final match today at the Fifth Regiment Armory, in Baltimore, meeting the league-leading Inter-Park netmen, which boasts of Eddie Jacobs at their head. The locals are in fourth place.

The Washington team, the city's other entrant club, winds up its indoor season tomorrow, against the American Legion Club. Washington is in fifth place, one notch ahead of the cellar inmates of the league, whom they play.

G. W. Swimmers Win; Max Rote in Star Role

Led by Max Rote, who won two individual races and swam the anchor leg in the relay, George Washington University's swimmers registered the first team victory in recent Colonial tank history by defeating the natators of William and Mary College, 41 to 25, last night in the Ambassador pool.

Rote, who has contributed heavily to the Colonials' scoring this year, captured the 100-yard free style in 59 seconds, and the 100-yard backstroke in 1:18 4-5. The relay team, composed of Rote, McMillan, Barnes and Garrett, defeated the Indians in 1:39 2-5.

James Kinsler and Thornton Burns scored other individual triumphs for G. W., the former leading the field in the 50-yard breaststroke and the latter outstroking his rivals in the 440-yard free style.

200-yard free style relay—Won by George Washington (McMillan, Barnes, Garrett and Rote). Time, 1:39 2-5.

CONFERENCE TITLE TO BLISS

Ben Franklin Five Bows By 29-18

Minneci and Burke in Leading Roles for Electricians.

Bliss, Ahead by 9-7 at Half, Steps Out in Last Period.

SURPASSING an earlier feat, Bliss Electrical School's basketers last night defeated Benjamin Franklin University's five, 29 to 18, to clinch the championship of the Washington Collegiate Conference. The game, played before a capacity audience in Silver Spring Armory, saw the winners take an early lead and hold command until the finish.

In their first meeting, the Electricians defeated the Accountants by one point, 19-18, thus breaking the Bennies' streak of victories in conference play inaugurated last year, when they won the title. Last night's loss was the second of the current season for the Bennies in conference competition, while the result at the same time gave Bliss a record of five wins and no defeats.

Bliss' scoring was fairly well distributed, with Minneci and Burke leading the individual point makers with 9 and 7 tallies, respectively. Sherman, of Benjamin Franklin, however, topped all hands in scoring with 12 points.

The Electricians rallied in the second half to win going away, the first period having ended 9-7 in their favor.

Entries Close Tuesday For A. A. U. Tourney

Entries close Tuesday night for the sixth, biggest and most important District A. A. U. basket ball tournament ever staged. The big event, which will crown seven District champion teams, starts March 1 at Tech High Gymnasium, under the auspices of The Post.

All players must be registered and team blanks filled out by midnight Tuesday. Registration as amateurs may be secured at the Boys Club, Third and C streets, or at The Post sports department. Blanks and information may be secured at either place.

The tuornament is expected to attract more than 100 teams and 1,000 players. It will be one of the sports features of the bicentennial year.

YALE BOXERS BATTLE VA. TONIGHT

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb. 19.—Virginia's boxers will bring their eleventh varsity season to a close against the undefeated Yale team in the Memorial Gymnasium tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock.

Boxing fans are delighted that after eleven long years the Virginia General Assembly has passed a bill that at last clears up the question of whether collegiate boxing is strictly legal. The passage of the amateur boxing bill by both the House and the Senate has finally removed whatever cloud of doubt may have hovered over intercollegiate ring activities within the Old Dominion.

Yale brings a strong team to the Memorial Gymnasium. Under the expert coaching of Moses King the Elleather pushers have been defeated in only four dual meets during twelve seasons. They are now in their second year without a reverse.

Virginia will be able to present her full strength against the Yale scrappers, with the three individual champions of the conference, Capt. Fenton Gentry, Bobby Goldstein and Douglas Myers, all in action.

Rules Shifted for Match.

By agreement of the rival managements, the rules used will be those of the intercollegiate association and not of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, which are official for the Southern Conference. Under these, Referee Edward Brockman, of Baltimore, must give his decision after the third round. In return for this concession, Yale has agreed to enter a heavyweight, a class not recognized for the intercollegiates.

While the Cavaliers have been pointing for Yale they have also been considering that they must defend their Southern championship here next week-end against the best glove swingers that Dixie has to offer. The sixth annual tournament of the conference is scheduled for Friday and Saturday, February 26 and 27.

Virginia's first year boxers, in a meet with Staunton Military Academy, close their season here Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock. These youngsters, who have had an in-and-out season, are coached by Bob Rainey, twice varsity captain and welterweight champion.

MARYLAND U. FROSH BEAT C. U. CUBS

MARYLAND UNIVERSITY'S freshman basket ball team evened up its score with the Catholic University Frosh when it gained a 24-23 decision over the latter in an exciting game played at College Park yesterday. The Cardinals won the first game played between the two by a single point.

Catholic led at the half, 10-7, but Maryland drew abreast of its opponent in the third period and assumed the lead. The Brooklanders rallied in the final period, going ahead by one point, holding this lead until all but two minutes of play had elapsed. "Mac" McCaw, Maryland guard, staked his team to the lead for the final time with a long pot shot from midcourt, which made the score 24-23 in the Old Liners' favor. Catholic blew two opportunities of winning the game when Rosenfield and Fleming failed to make any of the four free throws awarded them.

DELAWARE-HUDSON WINS.

The Knights of Columbus unlimited quintet received an unexpected setback when the Delaware and Hudson five won a 28-to-17 victory over the Caseys at Tech High School last night. The Knights led, 10 to 7, at the half, but the Coalmen staged a rally in the final period that carried them to victory.

Hitting the Head Pin

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON

ANOTHER Saturday and another sweepstakes. This time it is the southpaw stakes the first block of which will be rolled tonight at 8 o'clock at the Temple alleys. The second block is listed for next week at Georgetown Recreation. Approximately two dozen of the gentlemen who shoot from the portside are expected to face the barrier tonight.

Another event of no little importance, the Cumberland Valley Sweepstakes, will be rolled today at Hagerstown, Md., at Gene Raney's establishment. This affair ranks with the Eastern, Dixie and United States Sweepstakes, and the majority of the leading duckpinners in the East are entered. Twelve Washingtonians are expected to compete.

. . . And here are a couple of special matches. It just wouldn't be Saturday without the special matches. Maxie Rosenberg has gathered his Northeast Hupmobile team together, bundled the boys into a new straight eight Hup, and headed for the Tiny Town alleys, at Richmond, Va., where the home team will be met in the first block of a ten-game home-and-home match. In addition to himself, Maxie has Astor Clarke, Johnny Anderson, Joe Harrison and Jack Wolstenholme to defend the local honors.

The second special match on the program involves the Sunrise Bakery team and the Rinaldi Tailors. The Bakers were originally scheduled to meet the Five Greeks today, but somewhere between Monday and Thursday the fourth Greek dropped out of sight and has not been located. In addition, the boys could find no logical reason for fighting among themselves when they could band together and vent their wrath on a common enemy. The Tailors were reported to be polishing their heavy artillery in preparation for the match and are confident of emerging victorious. The Bakers will have Chipouras, Tompros, Ganarius, Poulos, Panos and Plakas in their line-up, while Freschi, Pricci, Maciotto, Rinaldi, Del Vecchio and Viatle will roll for Rinaldi.

Harmony's 1,587 set and Phoenix's 542 game were high in the Odd Fellows League at Convention Hall. Charley Young, with a 126 game, and Gerb, with 311 for his set, led the individual scoring.

Sam Corcoran was the big strike and spare man in the Washington Gas Light loop at Convention Hall. Sam had a game of 140 and set of 356. Fitting Department's 1,555 set and Accounting's 530 game were the best of the team scores.

Arcadia is rapidly winning a name as a happy hunting grounds for those seeking records. Last night the boys in the District Government loop discarded all of the old marks in favor of new ones. Elmer Wesley was responsible for the new individual marks. He put the airplane spin on the pins for a game of 167 and set of 416. Looks as though he is shooting for a berth on one of the big teams. Fire Department eclipsed the old team game mark with a score of 618, and Health Department added a few sticks to the team set record, which is now 1,726.

Brooks topped the scoring in the Interstate Commerce Commission League with a 130 game and 376 set. Team honors were accorded Traffic with its 546 and 1,594 scores.

The Minte Painters tumbled from first to third place in the Building Contractors loop at Arcadia, when the Standard Art Marble crew made off with all three games. The winners went into second place, while D. C. Butcher forged ahead of the rest of the pack by taking a trio from Rosslyn Steel. The third whitewash of the night was recorded when Southern Asbestos bowed to Todd. Fuller Stone Plant, A. W. Lee, Evans Plumbing, and Moyer took the odd ones from Heffron, Smoot Sand, Massapomax Sand, and George A. Fuller. Joe Freschi's 383 set and Dan Highsill's 143 game were high.

Patents No. 1 took the odd one from Mines, and Patents No. 2 won all three from Coast Survey in the Department of Commerce League at Rendezvous. Patents No. 2 smashed the team set record with a score of 1,718. Fahey, of Patents No. 1, had a game of 144 and set of 383. Kaschub also had a 383 set.

Among those present at the Jewelers League meeting, held at Columbia, were Jack Preller and Al Mueller. Jack went home with a 350 set tucked under his arm, and Al was toting a 155 game when last seen. Gault, No. 1, clinched the team honors with 552 and 1,574.

Indian Spring hammered the headpin for a 1,618 set and 589 game to win a trio from Columbia in the Golf Clubs loop at Silver Spring. Flanery, of Argyle, rolled a game of 138 and set of 352, but his team dropped a pair to Congressional. Manor copped the odd one from Beaver Dam. Its winning margin in the first game was one pin; in the second, it was two. Sam Rice had a 350 set for the night.

The Ford Electrical Co. team put the finishing touches to its defeat of the Park Circle quintet, of Baltimore, when it won an easy victory in the final block at Convention Hall last night. Ford rolled 557, 580, 601, 546, 578, 2,862. The visitors' games were 510, 550, 584, 560, 538, 2,742. Eddie Espey was high for the home team with a 610 set, which included a game of 154. Eddie Anderson's 150 and 578 were high for the Baltimoreans.

High scores in the General Accounting League at Convention Hall were Pay and Travel's 1,638 and 565, Taylor's 138 and Campbell's 345.

Houder's 345 set and Dunbar's 136 game were high in the Veterans' Bureau circuit at Convention Hall. The Chief Clerks took the team honors with 547 and 1,595.

G. W. COACH LAUDS PREP TOURNEY

Pixlee Sees Event as Aid to Developing Skill on Court.

"GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY is proud to receive the excellent prep school basket ball teams of Washington," James Pixlee, director of athletics at the Colonial institution, stated yesterday in an interview concerning the tournament which begins on George Washington's birthday and continues for the two following days to establish the best of the prep school basket ball teams.

"It is patent that only good, stiff competition, such as will accrue in the tournament, will provide a chance for increased skill in the game. I am glad that so many institutions have recognized this fact by entering teams, and I look forward to seeing them play with keen anticipation."

3,000 Programs To Be Issued.

Further plans to make the tournament an even greater event than it naturally will tend to be were taken yesterday when 3,000 programs listing the names and numbers of all the players, the colors of the schools, and descriptive information on the tournament and George Washington Bicentennial were printed, with an impression of the Father of the Country on the frontispiece.

There will be no admission fees to the games. Seats will be dispensed on the first-come first-served basis. The teams of all eight competing schools, Devitt, Emerson, St. John's, St. Alban's, Gonzaga, Landon, Georgetown Prep and Friends, are in excellent shape and fully confident that they will make a hot race of it. The Washington Post trophy will be the reward of the winner.

Rarely, if ever in Washington, have a group of teams more evenly matched been brought together in a tournament. The records of Emerson and Landon are about even for the year, with neither school quite up to customary caliber, but the remaining six are operating on a high and even level of skill.

Little to Choose Between Teams.

The age-old and sometimes reliable method of proving that each can beat the other, by means of comparative scores, makes a grand confusion of it. There is little to choose between them. If two clubs do stand out, they are St. John's and Georgetown Prep, which two teams have been seeded first and second in the tournament draw, so that they will not meet until the final round, providing they withstand the fire of the other clubs along the way.

STOCK PRICE RALLY TRIMMED IN SLUMP

New York, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—After jumping 1 to 7 points in the first fifteen minutes today, stocks spent the rest of the session trying to hold their gains. They succeeded reasonably well until the last half hour, when profit taking was not so readily absorbed, and the close, considering the brave start, was rather inglorious.

Net gains in many instances were reduced to fractions. Some stocks finished lower, some a point or two higher, but the average change for 90 issues used in the Associated Press Standard Statistics composite was a rise of only one-tenth of a point. Transfer of 700,000 shares in the first half hour contributed substantially to the total dealings of 2,431,712 shares.

A motive for so strong an opening was readily found in overnight news of the Stock Exchange's decision to require, beginning April 1, written and separate authorization by members' customers for the lending of their stocks to shorts. At first glance this appeared to spell serious embarrassment, if not disaster, to the bear faction, and covering orders for immediate execution piled up in enormous volume. Blocks of 1,000 to 8,000 shares changed hands during that initial quarter hour.

Realizing Sales Appear.

With the market well into new high ground for the year on this bulge, realizing sales appeared quickly. Shorts lost their panicky feeling, perhaps because they believed the new rule would not result in completing eliminating the amount of stock available for borrowing; also, April 1 is still a month and a half away.

Thus the overnight gains were deflated and the market jogged along contentedly, backing and filling until late afternoon offerings more than offset new buying.

U. S. Steel retained one-third of a 3-point rise, closing at 50½. The stock had not sold above 50 since early December. American Telephone's flight to 137¾ was interrupted by enough selling to give the shares a fractional net loss. Eastman Kodak, which had led with a 7-point rise, cut its gain to 2¼. Union Pacific blossomed out in a 5-point advance, but most of it was lost.

Other Stocks Sag.

American Can, Allied Chemical, Case, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Loew's, Sears, Roebuck, Consolidated Gas and others that had apparently held a large short interest sobered down in similar fashion.

Although the market primarily was preoccupied with its own affairs, there seemed to be some ground for speculative encouragement in such news items as the rise in brokers' loans, a drop in currency circulation and reports of mild optimism in retail and wholesale trade circles. Also, French francs eased under the gold point and U. S. government bonds continued on their good behavior. None of these items was sensationally bullish, but they found a place in the more pleasing financial picture which has been sketched this week.

Mercantile reviews indicated that even if business had not improved noticeably it was clinging to the side of cheerfulness. Bradstreet's reports from 35 leading cities disclosed "in some cases" a better sentiment and Dun's said there had been a continuance "in a more or less sporadic degree of the favorable factors that have marked commercial progress since the first of the month."

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Broader export demand, unfavorable crop reports from the Southwest, and New York Stock Market bulges had a brisk stimulating effect. Heavy buying of North American wheat for shipment overseas was estimated at an upward of 1,000,000 bushels, chiefly Canadian.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at a fraction setback from the day, with corn varying from ¼ decline to ¼ advance, oats ¼ to ⅝ up and provisions unchanged to 10 cents off.

Highest prices in wheat were reached in the final hour with a lively battle between bullish Chicago speculators and various strong commission houses. The commission houses were heavy sellers during upturns, but the market received aggressive buying support on setbacks and in the end the bulls had the advantage. European advices were to the effect that confidence existed on the part of overseas buyers, generally expectation being that import allowances of foreign wheat would be increased.

Reports of severe drought were received from India, and there was a persistent rumor that the Farm Board wheat purchase would be "impounded" indefinitely—that is, held off the market in some effective manner. Predictions also circulated that primary receipts of domestic wheat would be curtailed after an advance in railroad freight rates tomorrow. Unfavorable crop advices regarding domestic winter wheat came chiefly from western Kansas.

Corn and oats averaged higher with wheat, but enlarged country offerings of corn acted as a drag.

BOND MARKET RISES SLIGHTLY AT CLOSE

New York, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—Sentiment in the bond market improved today, although price changes in the majority of cases were narrow and trading somewhat dull. Sales for the day totaled $11,360,000, and the average for 60 corporate issues advanced a tenth of a point.

While interest in the United States Government list slackened a trifle, with four of the recently rapidly moving Treasuries showing fractional losses, the Liberty issues all registered moderate gains. The slight reaction in the Federals was attributed to profit taking, as a number of these have advanced around 5 points in the present movement.

Among the corporate mortgages, utilities attracted some attention with bonds of American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Columbia Gas & Electric and Louisville Gas & Electric registering substantial advances.

The railroad department, somewhat soft in the early part of the session, snapped back smartly near the close and marked up the averages slightly. Southern Pacific, weak following the omission of the road's dividend, recovered part of its losses. A single sale of Chicago & Northwestern general 5s showed a loss of 13 points. On the other hand Illinois Central collateral 4s of 1952 gained 6¾ points.

Industrial liens just about held their own, although Armour & Co., Remington Rand, Baldwin Locomotive, International Match, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Pure Oil moved to higher levels.

All of the Argentine obligations were conspicuous by their strength in the foreign section, advancing from 1 to 2 points. Brazilian and Buenos Aires loans also gained substantially. German and Japanese bonds were easy.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, Feb. 19 (A.P.).—A further advance which carried May contracts to 7.15, or 55 points above the low level of last week, featured today's cotton market.

The opening was very steady at an advance of 7 to 11 points on a continuation of the recent buying movement, which again indded considerable demand through houses with foreign connections. Active months sold 10 to 12 points net higher during the first few minutes, with March advancing to 7.00 and October to 7.59, but the demand was then supplied by realizing and Southern selling.

Business tapered off during the middle of the day and prices worked down to 6.90 for March and 7.48 for October, or to yesterday's closing quotations, but stiffened up with the demand becoming more active in the late trading.

The early advance resulted from the relatively firm showing of Liverpool and strength in the stock and grain markets. Houses with Liverpool and continental connections were again said to be buyers here, while a further demand was reported from the Far East, which was supposed to include some buying for Bombay and Japanese account.

This was accompanied by further reports that American cotton was being substituted for other growths in the Oriental market.

Liverpool cables said Manchester and continental liquidation had been taken by Bombay buying and trade calling in that market and reported fair sale of cotton cloth to the continent, South America and Africa. Exports today, 46,323 bales, making 5,631,495 so far this season. Port receipts, 30,846. United States port stocks, 4,810,306.

35 Sanitary Bonds Are Sold to Bank

Prince Georges Institution Takes $35,000 Worth at Bid of 90.

Thirty-five of the $1,000 bonds of the Suburban Sanitary Commission have been sold to the Prince Georges County Bank & Trust Co. at 90, it was announced yesterday by T. Howard Duckett, chairman of the commission.

The bonds were part of an issue of $130,000 authorized by the Maryland Public Service Commission for the extension of water and sewer lines in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties. The issue was approved by the Public Service Commission Tuesday, but no bids were received for the entire lot. The private sale followed.

No further sales are in view, it was said yesterday. Proceeds of yesterday's transaction will be used to finance current work and the rest of the securities will probably be held until the bond market improves.

BOARD OF EDUCATION SUPPORTS PLAN FOR NEW NEGRO SCHOOL

OPPOSITION OF GILLIGAN FAILS TO PREVENT MOVE

Over the strenuous protest of Henry Gilligan, the Board of Education yesterday voted to authorize the District Commissioners to proceed with the purchase of land for a new colored school on Bates road to replace a portable.

This vote was in the form of a reaffirmation of a former action, and it was taken in the face of a storm of protests from citizens of Petworth and other sections affected. The board, after receiving the objections two weeks ago from a delegation of nearly 100 persons, asked the District Commissioners to suspend purchase of the land until a thorough investigation was instituted.

In its final action the board was guided by a report from Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, which showed that by September of this year there will be 94 colored children in the area requiring school accommodation. At present there are 86 colored children who should be served by a school located in the vicinity of Bates road, according to Dr. Ballou's report. On February 2, 33 children were enrolled at the Bates road portable, the report showed.

Most Are District Residents.

All these children, with the exception of eight, are residents of the District. If a school is not built on Bates road many of the colored children mentioned would have to walk more than 3 miles to school, Dr. Ballou told the board. At present many of the children walk long distances, he said.

Maps presented to the individual board members showed that the Bates road school would serve the colored pupils living in an area bounded on the north by the District line, on the east by a line drawn approximately from the District line through the Taft Junior High School, through the Brookland school, south to Trinity College; bounded on the south by a line extended from Trinity College west to Macfarland Junior High School, and on the west by a line drawn from Macfarland Junior High north to the District line, running slightly east of the Whittier School.

The lines on the east, south and west are approximately half way between the Bates road site and the nearest colored school in each direction, Dr. Ballou said.

Objection Presented.

In fighting the action, Mr. Gilligan said that he believed he had the reputation of insisting on the colored people receiving proper school accommodations, but that he was opposed "to forcing on a white community a colored school."

Dr. Ballou said that he was willing to pledge himself not to recommend an estimate to Congress for the new colored school if it could be proved that the colored people were disappearing from the area, and if there are not enough colored children in the area to warrant building of a school.

The Rev. I. R. A. Bennett, colored member, objected to the colored people being used as "a football."

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle said that in her opinion it is the duty of the board to provide education for colored children in the vicinity. "We can't have children walking 2 and 3 miles to school," she pointed out.

Protests Made on Plan For Northwest School

A letter protesting the erection of a colored school at Rock Creek Church road and Allison street northwest was yesterday sent to Dr. Abram Simon, president of the Board of Education. Bitter opposition was expressed to the proposed school by residents of the community.

The letter, sponsored by the Chillum Heights Citizens Association, read in part:

"It is only fair and just that white property owners in this community should be given time to demonstrate that the future of the community will be predominately, if not entirely white. Developments which will take place during the next year will definitely and unmistakably establish this trend. The question is a vital one to residents of this section and we ask that every possible step be taken to prevent the erection of the school."

Jobless Man Gas Victim.

The wife of Frank H. Brown, 54 years old, of 2118 Eighteenth street northwest, found him unconscious on the floor of the kitchen of their apartment yesterday morning with four jets of a gas range open. Mr. Brown is in an undetermined condition at Emergency Hospital. Police say Mr. Brown had been out of work for some time.

BICENTENNIAL SPIRIT PERVADES CAPITAL IN EARLY PROGRAMS

MT. VERNON INCIDENTS TOLD AT AMERICAN U.

Numerous Organizations Are Ready to Launch Varied Fete Activities.

The spirit of the George Washington Bicentennial, which will completely engulf the Capital when the great celebration gets underway on Monday, infused various sections of the city yesterday and manifested itself in the early inauguration of programs.

Georgetown University officially opened its Bicentennial program last night with the first of a series of ten public lectures on Soviet Russia by Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., regent of the school of foreign service. The lectures will constitute a new academic course at the university.

The university will hold a George Washington observance and historical exhibit on March 6.

Dr. Walsh, who has been delivering annual public lectures on Russia since 1925, devoted his lecture last night to a study of the American background, "The Age of Washington."

Systems Are Compared.

Dr. Walsh outlined the study he was about to make in the present course of lectures between the political, social and economic systems established by Lenin and that created by Washington.

Students at American University, at a Bicentennial program, yesterday, heard Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, descendant of the Washington family, and the only living person who was born at Mount Vernon, express doubt over the veracity of the cherry tree story, and relate another story about a horse which she vouched for as true, declaring it disclosed even more faithfully the character of George Washington and his reputation for truth.

George Washington's mother had a fine spirited horse, according to the story, of which his mother was very fond. One day while George was riding the horse it dropped dead. When his mother asked him about it, Mrs. Howard related, George Washington told the whole story.

An historical study of the spiritual side of George Washington, published by Washington Cathedral, was released yesterday. The study discloses that Washington, from early youth and throughout his entire life, was guided by prayer and his belief in Christianity, both during the times of despondency and defeat in the Revolutionary War and during his period of triumph after victory as the Nation's President.

Services at Epiphany.

One of the first events on the official District Bicentennial program is the service to be held at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon by the Sons of the Revolution in the Church of the Epiphany on G stret, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets northwest. This service has been held annually by the Sons of the Revolution since 1915, but this year it has been given official recognition by the District Bicentennial Commission, having been given a place on the commission's program.

The service will be conducted by the Rev. Ze Barney T. Phillips, chaplain of the U. S. Senate; the Rev. George Atkinson, rector of St. James Church; the Rev. Charles Warner, rector of St. Alban's Church; the Rev. Francis Yarnell, and the Rev. Alvin T. Williams, of the Parish of the Epiphany. The sermon will be preached by the Right Rev. Robert E. L. Strider, Bishop Coadjutor of West Virginia.

John Alden Carpenter, distinguished American composer, will be introduced on the Damrosch Symphony radio hour by Representative Sol Bloom, associate director of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission, between 1 and 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Mr. Bloom will speak from Washington and Mr. Carpenter will respond from his home in Chicago.

The fourth degree Knights of Columbus will hold one of the largest initiations in its history here at the Shoreham Hotel at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon. Seventy-five candidates are expected to take the degree. Most of the candidates will be from Washington, but nearby districts will also be represented.

Annapolis Man Hurt by Auto.

KEECH HITS POWER CONTRACT RESALES BY STREET RAILWAY

Asserts Perpetuation Under Merger Plans Would Be Blow to Public.

TESTIFIES AT CLOSING HEARING OF COMMITTEE

Keech asked the committee to strike from the bill section 10, which would allow the new company to take over all existing contracts of the Washington Railway & Electric Co., through which it buys power from the Potomac Electric Power Co. and sells it again at a profit.

This profit rightfully belongs to the Potomac Electric Power Co., which, under the consent decree, would have to pass it on to electricity consumers in reduced rates, Keech told the committee.

Action in Two Weeks.

Chairman Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, in announcing the hearings closed, said the committee will meet in executive session in about two weeks and vote on the bill.

Senator Capper personally favors several of the proposed amendments, including some advanced by citizen groups, and opposed by heads of the traction companies. In this he differs from Chairman Loring M. Black, jr. (Democrat), New York, of the House utilities subcommittees. Black favors reporting the bill out of his subcommittee with few if any amendments.

People's Counsel Keech, in his attack on the power clause in the merger bill, declared projection of existing power contracts into the merger agreement would be "robbing Peter to pay Paul." He said the clause might eventually react to the detriment of the railways themselves if the price of electricity continues to fall.

Replying to Keech, President William F. Ham, of the Washington, Electric Railway Co., admitted that sale of power to other companies under existing contracts is "profitable." It must be made part of the merger, he said, as the contracts are "binding" and must be fulfilled.

Both Mr. Ham and President John H. Hanna, of the Capital Traction Co., vigorously fought proposals to limit the merged company from "forms of transportation" other than street cars and motor buses.

Both denied any immediate intention of entering the taxicab business, but contended "transportation needs might change." Mr. Hanna pointed out that the company might want to operate subway or elevated lines, should the need arise.

Aviation Lines Possible.

Keech argued that the company could even enter the aviation field under the broad provisions of the bill.

Several concessions were made by the traction heads yesterday. Mr. Hanna disclosed that conferences looking to a "compromise" on provisions relieving the companies of paying for paving of three-fourths of the new streets traversed by their lines, are now in progress with representatives of the District Engineer's office, and agreement expected.

Mr. Hanna further said the companies are willing to include some reduced school fare provision, providing they are not excluded from appeal.

In the matter of sightseeing bus competition, through operation of chartered buses, and on the question of universal free transfers, both Mr. Ham and Mr. Hanna remained adamant. They said the bill, as it stood, without any amendments, represented a "compromise," and not what the companies really wanted.

Loss of Business Bared.

Mr. Hanna pictured the Capital Traction Co. as steadily losing business from private car and taxicab competition. He said it was hoped that overhead savings under the new company might help to restore earnings to the point where they would render investors a reasonable return.

Before the hearings concluded, Edward Young, representing the Central Business Men's Association, charged the companies would commence taxicab operation shortly after the bill was approved. He said that in three years of attending public utilities hearings he had frequently seen them shift their position. Mr. Hanna took sharp exception to his remark.

Others appearing before the committee were William McK. Clayton, chairman of utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, who defended that organization's amendments, and Conrad Syme, who represented the Blue and Gray sightseeing lines.

ADMISSION CLAIMED IN EXTORTION CASE

Police Say One of 2 Suspects Confesses to Threatening Grocery Clerk.

A confession that he and Harry Buster Lewis had extorted money totaling almost $500 from James Slusher, 25 years old, on ten separate occasions, was signed last night by John William Mahoney, 27-year-old North Carolinian, according to police.

Detective Sergt. Nally said Mahoney made his statement and signed it in the presence of Nally, Precinct Detectives Vare and Slusher, at the Fourth Precinct Station, where Mahoney is being held. Charges of extortion were placed against both Mahoney and Lewis last night. Lewis, held at the Eleventh Precinct Station, still refused to talk.

In the alleged confession Mahoney said he first met the $25-a-week grocery clerk through Lewis. This was early in November, 1931. They met at the store where Slusher works, at Eleventh and K streets northwest, and then went to a park, where Lewis got Slusher to give him $5.

"We then asked Slusher for $100 apiece, but he said no, he could not spare that much, but would give us $50 apiece. That night we asked for $100 apiece, which he gave us the next day in Franklin Park. I left Washington that day and went home to Fayetteville, N. C., the confession read.

After a week, according to the confession, Mahoney returned and told the grocery clerk he wanted $60. He said $45 was given him there at the grocery store, and the next Monday he got $10 more. Then, Mahoney said, he left Washington for Rocky Mount, N. C., and during that time sent Slusher three letters, "threatening to expose him to his people."

Mahoney said he got $113 in money orders as a result of these letters. He confessed that he returned to Washington about January 15, and wrote Slusher asking for $8.50, which he received by letter through general delivery. He said that he and Lewis went to Slusher's house about February 10 and got $5 each, and were trapped when they went back for $50 additional which had been promised them.

ROBERTS ANSWERS ATTACKS ON P.U.C. TAXI-METER ORDER

Files 134-Page Brief Setting Out Zone System Is Not Best for Capital.

DECLARES TWO ISSUES ARE INVOLVED IN CASE

No Serious Diminution Likely in Cabs, He Says; Living Wage Is Held Need.

William A. Roberts, prolific special assistant corporation counsel for the Public Utilities Commission, made a bid for a new legal record late yesterday when he filed a 134-page memorandum in the District Supreme Court in answer to the appeals of the City and Bell Cab Corporations from the meter taxicab order. Oddly enough, the document, in legal parlance, is known as a brief.

The litigation over the commission's order has hung on for several months now, with several hearings, verbal arguments and numerous briefs being filed, while the taxicab industry goes along pretty much as it pleases, save for a change in rates.

In an effort to cover the entire field since and including the public hearing last fall, Mr. Roberts has attempted to answer by legal precedent and by previous testimony all of the attacks launched against the order by People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech, the Federation of Citizens Associations, the Federation of Business Mens Associations and counsel for the appellants.

Sees Two Material Issues.

"In spite of the ingenious and highly technical arguments advanced in opposition to the commission's order," says Mr. Roberts, "the fact remains that there are only two material questions involved in this proceedings:

"(1) Did the commission have jurisdiction over taxicabs as public utility common carriers within the meaning of the public utility act?

"(2) Have the petitioners successfully assumed the burden of proving 'by clear and satisfactory evidence that the determination of the commission complained of is inadequate, unreasonable or unlawful?'"

Mr. Roberts contends that the order requiring all cabs to be equipped with meters will cause no "serious diminution" in taxicab travel despite arguments of the people's counsel and others that the public favors the zone system of operation. Only the border riders, who get unusually long rides under the present system, will be lost, he predicts, and the traffic among persons who are discriminated against now should increase with the advent of meters. Some patrons now, he said, pay 40 or 60 cents for a ride of less than 2 miles, when they cross a zone boundary, whereas under the meter rates they would pay only 25 cents.

Propaganda May Have Effect.

"Undoubtedly the long campaign of propaganda against the meter system conducted by the petitioners will adversely affect traffic immediately after the meter operation goes into effect," he states, "but the customer will soon learn the comparative cost.

"The Washington riding public is not so unreasonable and self-interested that they are willing to see taxicab operation conducted at rates which will not permit payment of operating expenses at a living wage for drivers, and the latter, regardless of protestations to the contrary, has been the result of the zone system of operation."

Justice Jesse C. Adkins is expected to render his decision on the validity and reasonableness of the commission's order as soon as he has time to wade through this last memorandum. Should he uphold the order, however, it will be 60 days from the day he announces his decision before the order becomes effective because of a previous agreement by the commission.

NEW GAS RATE DUE EARLY NEXT WEEK

Clayton's Testimony Holds Company's Proposed Cut Too Small.

The Public Utilities Commission is expected to announce a new schedule of gas rates early next week unless congressional matters require too much of its time. The hearing on the proposals of the Washington Gas Light Co. was concluded at noon yesterday with some unexpected fireworks set off by William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Indications are that approximately $244,000, rather than the $211,000 suggested originally by the gas company, will be cut off the consumers' yearly bills on a basis of last year's consumption. The domestic rates are expected to follow somewhat the proposals of People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech and William A. Roberts, special assistant corporation counsel.

Testimony was offered at the hearing yesterday by Byers McK. Bachman, chief accountant of the commission, to show that the gas company last year earned 10.25 per cent return on a joint valuation of $19,800,000 and that the $211,000 saving proposed by the utility would cut this net profit only 1 per cent.

The testimony was offered upon the instance of Mr. Clayton and over the vigorous protests of Wilton J. Lambert and Arthur Dean, counsel representing the gas company.

The valuation of $19,800,000 was arrived at, Mr. Bachman said, by taking the original valuations of 1916 for both the Washington Gas Light Co. and the Georgetown Gas Light Co., which was $8,800,000 and $775,000, respectively, and adding net betterments from year to year without making an allowance for depreciation since 1916.

Counsel for the gas company objected that the question of valuation was beyond the scope of the rate hearing, but he was overruled by Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman. Mr. Dean asserted that $30,000,000 would be nearer the fair value of the properties of the gas companies at present.

Merry-Go-Round Baffles Foes of Utility Merger

Opposition to the new Capital Transit Co. operating anything but street cars and buses was confounded yesterday by President William F. Ham, of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. He made known a merry-go-round is involved in the merger deal.

The merry-go-round, Mr. Ham confided, is located at Glen Echo Park, owned and operated by the Washington Railway & Electric Co. Not only the carousel, but at least one swimming pool and a sandwich stand are involved in the merger, he said.

People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech and William McK. Clayton had warned there was danger the company might operate taxicabs or even airplanes under the agreement. They remained speechless after Mr. Ham's revelation.

MERCHANTS OPPOSE AUTO LICENSE BOOST

Mapes Bill Is Described as Unfair by Governors of Association.

The board of governors of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association at their meeting held yesterday afternoon went on record as being vigorously opposed to the Mapes bill, which would require a schedule of fees based upon weight of motor vehicles. The board pointed out that the proposed schedule of fees would increase the cost of tags for the small passenger vehicle from the present charge of $1 to about $10 and would require the operators of the larger commercial vehicles to pay as high as $1,200 per vehicle. The fees from such registrations would produce about $1,600,000 in revenue, while the proposed 4-cent gas tax would result in a tax of over $3,500,000.

The total tax under the proposed schedule would amount to about $5,300,000, whereas the total expense of construction and maintenance of highways, including salaries of the Highway Department and operation of the office of the director of traffic, is but $3,974,000.

The Merchants and Manufacturers Association is of the opinion that the taxes on automobiles should not exceed the actual cost of construction and maintenance of highways, and pointed out that the proposed bill would provide revenue in excess of this amount by over $1,250,000.

The board voted to have their committee vigorously oppose any such increase in taxes, as being entirely unnecessary and an unfair tax upon automobile owners and operators.

The board went on record as favoring the Hayden bill, which would prohibit the sending of unsolicited merchandise through the mails.

The board also approved the Bingham bill, providing for the establishment of an airport on the site of the present Hoover Field.

DUTCH WRITER HEARD BY DEANS OF WOMEN

Interdependence of World Described by Dr. Van der Leew.

The world has become a vast organism in which no one part can function separately, Dr. J. J. Van der Leew, author and lecturer of Leyden, Holland, declared in an address on "The Lost Art of Living" before the National Association of Deans of Women last night at the Mayflower Hotel.

"In this vast living organism of which we have made the world we continue the old acquisition method of production and distribution instead of the functional," Dr. Van der Leew said. "Man has mechanized his emotions. He has shut himself off from the perfect unity of the world without and the world within. But modern man does yearn for the secret of happy living, and he must find it through education."

Miss Sarah Norris, dean of women at Minnesota State College, was elected secretary of the association, and Miss Agnes Ellen Harris, dean of women at the University of Alabama, first vice president. Florence K. Root, dean of women at Cleveland (Ohio) College, continues as president for another year, and Mary Finlay Pilcher, dean of girl, high school, Montclair, N. J., continues as treasurer. Miss Adele Stamp, dean of women, University of Maryland, at College Park, was elected university section chairman.

The meeting of the deans of women will be concluded today with a session this morning, at which Dr. Lillian Gilbreth, Montclair, N. J., and Mary Gilson, of the University of Chicago, will speak, and a luncheon, at which Rabbi Samuel H. Goldenson, of Pittsburgh, will speak on "Justice in the Economic Process."

Man Brought Here On Bigamy Charge

Linden Cecil Stage, 26-year-old cabinetmaker, was returned to this city from Rochester, N. Y., yesterday by Detective Sergt. A. D. Mansfield, who went to the northern city to bring the man to this city, where he is wanted in connection with a warrant charging bigamy.

On April 4, 1927, Stage is alleged to have married Miss Beatrice York, in Dover, N. H. Later Miss York told Stage she was "through" and he said he thought by that remark she had obtained a divorce. On December 22, 1931, Stage married Miss Anna Frances Arnold, then employed at the Franklin Square Inn, in this city.

Recently parents of the second Mrs. Stage learned of Stage's first marriage and instituted proceedings against him. The second Mrs. Stage, who is with her parents in Feedinghills, Mass., has wired authorities here that she will come to Washington to prosecute Stage.

New Plane Motor Is Demonstrated

Federal Experts Witness Operation of Revolutionary Type.

Several Government officials and other aviation experts yesterday witnessed a demonstration at the Washington-Hoover Airport of what is claimed to be one of the most outstanding developments in airplane motors.

The new type of power unit, according to H. B. Augustine, the inventor, is expected to aid materially in the production of the small commercial airplane for family and private use. The motor is radial, two cycle stroke, four cylinder type, without valves and without an oil system. The engine has no springs, or valves, and due to the mixing of the oil and gas there is no need for preliminary warming.

Department of Commerce tests for approval and licensing of the new motor will be run within the next week. The Augustine motor is manufactured in Buffalo by the Champion Motor Co.

New City Directory Is Out In Time for Bicentennial

Coming almost on the Bicentennial of George Washington's birth, Boyd's 1932 District of Columbia Directory, a book of 2,348 pages, prefaced with a full-page reproduction of the Houdon bust of Washington, and a brief article concerning the Bicentennial, is now being delivered to purchasers throughout the city.

The classified section of the directory discloses 727 different kinds of enterprises located here. Of these the retail grocers are by far the most numerous, numbering no less than 1,700. However, 180 of the 727 commercial lines are represented by a lone dealer, manufacturer or practitioner.

Herbert Hoover still resides in the White House, but in the new directory he has moved from page 833 to page 813. Great and famous names are still plentiful; even Julius Cesar comes in for his share. A host of George Washingtons, many Woodrow Wilsons and Daniel Websters are recorded.

Sixteen blacksmiths, three horseshoers, one harness dealer and one livery stable alone remain to carry on the traditions of a vanished period, the directory shows. Phonograph dealers are reduced to two, and miniature golf courses have declined to six.

It may be noted as a bit of "homeographic" irony that, according to the new guide, Frank Hospital lives next door to Frank Coffin; that John Beveridge resides on Brandywine avenue; that the only Mother in the city is a man and that five of the six Ladys listed are men. Interesting, too, is the fact that Mrs. Mary Christmas, Rose Rose and Lily White are all residents here.

Warning of Girl, 5, Saves Life of Gas-Periled Chum

What's a spanking or two when a friend's in need was 5-year-old Peggy Buckley's apparent philosophy yesterday when she braved that fearsome juvenile penalty to save the life of her playmate, Herbert Needham, 5, and his dog, Patsy.

The three were playing in the garage in the rear of Peggy's home at 1012 C street southeast. The children had been warned sternly not to "fool with the automobile" in the garage. But somehow Herbert could not resist the temptation and stepped on the starter, the motor responding.

In a minute the fumes of the engine began to affect him in the closed garage and he slumped over unconscious, as did the dog, Patsy. Peggy began to feel "funny," but managed to open the door and, braving parental reprimand for "fooling with that automobile," gave the alarm.

Fire rescue apparatus revived both Herbert and the dog, but they were none too soon. Herbert was reported as being entirely recovered last night at his home around the corner from Peggy's, at 310 Tenth street southeast.
